Where Are the Blue Chips?
Captain Hawks Again.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

REPUBLICANS AND Democrats in Congress, not certain which side really has control, are enjoying a love feast.

"Our country is in danger," the Democrats say, with tearful earnestness, "and we shall help you Republicans to bring back prosperity. No partisanship, no selfishness, on our side of the house."

SENATOR WATSON for the Republicans, accepts the generous offer. And on the theory that "a dwarf standing on a giant's shoulder can see farther than the giant," something pleasing may happen.

ONE RADICAL senator, Mr. Brookhart, sounds a hostile note which will find a sympathetic welcome in many places. He is convinced that the Republicans deserve all they got in the election, but he isn't sure the Democrats deserve any of their victories.

NEW YORK builders discover that they can supply "white collar" workers with rooms at $20 a month each. That is no great discovery. Mr. Ecker, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, long since built excellent apartments to rent at $8 per room, giving first chance to his own employes, to school teachers and policemen. And he earned 6 to 8 per cent net on the investment for his policy holders.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has since done the same.

WHERE ARE the snows of yesteryear, and where are the "blue chips" stocks selling at $200, $300, $400, $500 a share and higher, so recently?

They have vanished from the stock list and the ticker that

SOVIET WAR PLOT LAID TO FRANCE

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 11. — (AP.) — What is described as the most ambitious plot yet uncovered for the overthrow of the Soviet government was outlined today with the publication of a sweeping indictment charging eight anti-Soviet leaders with conspiring to overthrow the Stalin regime.

Lawrence of Arabia, that glamorous figure who appears on the British army rolls as "Aircraftsman Shaw," and the outstanding statemen and financiers of half a dozen nations were named as having aided and financed the movement.

Poincare and Briand of France, Sir Henri Deterding, British oil magnate, Lord Churchill of England (persumably Winston Churchill) and prominent figures in Poland, Rumania and Finland, were named as co-conspirators.

Veteran Fire Fighter Dies Battling Blaze, Another Suffers Broken Back

A veteran fireman fell dead and another was injured seriously during a five-alarm fire in the two-story brick building at 1700-02-04 Penn avenue last night.

It was the last alarm for Albert Billeter, 65, of 406 East Ohio street, a veteran of 32 years' service. Billeter, driver of No. 7 fuel truck, collapsed at the scene and died a short time later in Mercy Hospital from apoplexy, Police and Fire Surgeon D. E. Sable said.

Billeter joined the fire department in old Allegheny 32 years ago and until 12 years ago when he became driver of the fuel truck, he was attached to No. 46 Engine Company. He leaves his wife and six children.

Lady Astor in Commons Row; Member Suspended

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Lady Astor was the central figure in a sharp debate in the House of Commons this afternoon which revolved about the clause in the education bill raising from 14 to 15 the age at which children may leave school, and granting a maintenance fund to parents of school children between those ages.

The debate began when McGovern, answering a conservative assertion that parents did not want to leave their children in school for an extra year, exclaimed:

"That's a lie."

He was asked to withdraw the observation.

He refused to retract, however, and the speaker, in the full dignity of wig and gown, was sent for.

Sir Charles Trevelyan, president of the board of education, moved that the rec[illegible]nt member be suspended and the motion was carried by a vote of 305 to 40.

FIGHT ON MOORE WILL LIKELY

A promise alleged to have been made before his marriage to Lillian Russell, famous stage beauty, is said to be the basis of a threatened suit to break the will of Alexander P. Moore, former Pittsburgh newspaper publisher and diplomat.

New York counsel for Mrs. Dorothy O'Reilly Calvit, daughter of Lillian Russell, are said to have declared that Moore promised his bride-to-be that in event of her death he would provide for Dorothy as his own child.

Miss Russell left Moore the major portion of her estate, consisting of jewels, art collection and furs, making provision for her daughter in the sum of $50 a week in a trust fund.

Moore, who left an estate of near $1,000,000, is said to have uttered his promise regarding Dorothy in the presence of a dozen or more persons, who are said to be willing to testify in Mrs. Calvit's effort to secure a large portion of the Moore estate. She was left only $1,000 in Moore's will.

Judge George V. Moore, of Common Pleas Court, a nephew of the former publisher, is a beneficiary in the residuary estate of his uncle.

Moore bequeathed $25,000 to Mrs. Enrico Caruso, to whom he once was reported betrothed. He also willed $100,000 to the queen of Spain at whose court he was ambassador, for charitable purposes.

TUNNEY WINS MARA SUIT VERDICT

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, today won a smashing legal victory when a jury returned a verdict in his favor in the suit brought against him by Timothy J. Mara, promoter, for $526,812, alleging breach of contract.

Tunney, who had been leaning forward in his seat, smiled with satisfaction when the verdict was read.

The jury took three polls before reaching agreement. The first vote was taken less than five minutes after they retired for deliberation, and recorded 10 to 2 in favor of Tunney. The next vote was 11 to 1, and the final vote gave the unanimous decision to Tunney.

Mara, in his suit, had claimed $500,000 from Tunney's earnings on the ground that the former heavyweight champion had employed him to get a fight with Jack Dempsey, then the titleholder.

Tunney personally thanked the jurors, shaking hands with each of them.

The retired champion said:

"The verdict was just. It certainly justifies the stand I have taken ever since this claim was made against me in 1926."

U. S. Must Wage Peace As Duty to Dead, Hoover Declares

By GEORGE R. HOLMES.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—"We must wage peace continuously—with the same energy as they wage war."

Twelve years to the day and hour after the guns ceased firing on the western front, President Hoover advanced this thought today as a solemn obligation which the nation owes the memory of the dead and the well-being of those who survived the great war. He said:

"A solemn obligation lies upon us to press forward in our pursuit of those things for which they died. Our duty is to seek every new and widening opportunity to insure the world against the horror and irretrievable wastage of war."

The world of the wartime allies gave the Armistice anniversary today its annual salute of silence.

Fog Delays Woman Flier's Cuba Hop

The dense fog that has been lying over Pittsburgh for the past several days will delay Mrs. Keith Miller, Australian flyer, in her take-off here on her flight to Havana, Cuba, for at least two more days, according to William S. Brotzman, weather forecaster. Mrs. Miller consulted Brotzman today on flying conditions.

TRIBUTE PAID TO HERO DEAD

Martial music, the thunder of guns and the rythmic tread of thousands of soldiers, "marching as to war," formed the paradox of Pittsburgh's celebration of Armistice Day—the symbol of world peace.

Rain, starting at 10:30, marred the spectacular feature of the day.

Soldiers of the world struggle, the Spanish War and those who served on the Mexican border, marshalled in military array to mark the twelfth anniversary of the end of killing in humanity's most stupendous cataclysm.

SILENT TRIBUTE

Many of the organizations were headed by commanders who led them to death or victory, in an imposing pageant that traversed downtown streets, circled the North Side Park area, and disbanded shortly after halting, at parade rest and the sounding of "Taps," for one minute at 11 o'clock in silent tribute to the heroes who fell in France, Flanders, and on other World War fields. Thousands lined the route of march and tears were as much in evidence as cheers as the huge crowd paid tribute to the world's most unselfish fighters.

The parade, sponsored by the Federation of War Veterans' So-

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Nov. 11.—Armistice Day took on a war-like air here today when a platoon of doughboys, in steel helmets and armed with rifles, marched to a grocery store, which had refused to close for the day under proclamation of Mayor C. D. Bradfield and hurled gas bombs into the place.

Mayor Bradfield refused to comment on the attack.

VAST U. S. BUILDING PROJECTS FAVORED TO AID JOBLESS

STATES' ROAD SHARE MAY BE WAIVED

Senator Harris Points to Millions Available on Federal Highway Projects

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—A host of senators, some victorious, some defeated, and others grateful they weren't candidates last week, were returning to the capital today, convinced that Congress must act quickly to relieve national unemployment before winter creates widespread suffering.

There was general approval of a program calling for increased appropriations for public buildings, federal-aid roads and inland waterways with a speeding of all outstanding projects authorized at the last session.

WAIVE STATE'S SHARE

Senator William J. Harris, (Dem.), of Georgia, went so far as to recommend that the government waive the condition, making states equally share the cost of new roads, in order to rush road construction before the snows halt such projects in the north. He said:

"The government should waive the 50-50 assessment against the states for new roads. It is the best thing Congress can do this time. The construction of new roads will benefit workers in every section of the country, helping the unemployed in rural communities as well as in the larger cities and populous districts. Such an undertaking while reducing unemployment and supplying a livelihood to thousands would give the nation a lasting benefit. I hope the President will make such a recommendation to Congress."

Harris referred to the provision in all existing appropriations for federal-aid roads, which requires the state to contribute 50 per cent of its cost. When the state announces it is ready to furnish its share, the government allots the other 50 per cent and the construction work is started under Army supervision.

MILLIONS AVAILABLE

Inquiry at the Public Roads Bureau revealed that only $84,000,000 of the $125,000,000 appropriated by Congress at its last session has been obligated by the government since July 1, the start of the new fiscal year. Officials explained the delay in disbursing the remainder of the $125,000,000 fund was due to the failure of states to announce construction programs and to deposit their share of the cost. Under the Harris proposal, the government would be directed to pay out the other $41,000,000 without waiting on the states to appropriate a like sum.

Every returning senator expressed a desire to aid unemployment and all deemed this problem the biggest facing the country. Senator Fess (rep) of Ohio, the Republican national chairman, said he expected the President would make a series of emergency recommendations in his message to Congress.

Senator Robsion (rep) of Ky., defeated last Tuesday, also declared Congress should relieve unemployment at once. He said there were thousands of miners out of work in his state, who would require assistance this winter.

PEOPLE URGED TO STUDY WAR PREVENTION

Gen. Cocheu Recommends Washington's Formula of Keeping Armed for Peace

The American people should make a study of war prevention lest its men be sacrificed in another struggle such as the World War, according to Brig. Gen. Frank S. Cocheu, Armistice Day speaker over Station KDKA. The speaker indicated that a sufficient defensive armament is the best prevention. He said:

"Wars, as a rule, are unnecessary and can be avoided if proper, reasonable, adequate and timely steps be taken. It is an uncontrovertible fact that we drifted into the World War due to ignorance on the part of some and indifference on the part of others."

SHOULD DECIDE SOLUTION

Among the many solutions advanced for the prevention of war are defensive preparedness, internationalism, outlawry of war, leagues of nations, limitation of armament, disarmament and world courts; it is the duty of every voter, he said, to study the question of war prevention and make his opinion known to his representative in Congress.

Stating that such a study would show that large armies, internationalism, Communism and Sovietism go hand in hand together, Gen. Cocheu mentioned that nearly half the sovereign nations of the world today are in a state of unrest or revolution. European nations are spending $6,000,000 each day on war preparations, he said.

QUOTES WASHINGTON

Until disarmament of spirit as well as disarmament in fact is reached, no nation will be safe while another is armed, Gen. Cocheu continued and concluded:

"You will remember that Washington, a profound student of government, predicted that 'If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel,' and that he also advised that 'taking care always to keep ourselves, by suitable establishments, on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.'"

LAUDS HOOVER

Pointing out that "our most eminent statesman and leader" (President Hoover) has recently warned that, to maintain the respect of other nations we must have an impregnable, unaggressive defense, General Cocheu advanced the theory that, this advice, if followed, would have prevented the World War and kept us out of many controversies not our concerns.

General Cocheu predicted that, if the people make a study of war prevention, they will reject other apparent solutions of the problem and "recognize the wisdom contained in that passage of the Bible which reads:

CONVENTION ON DRY LAW FORECAST

Wickersham Body Said to Hold Valid Petitions of 29 States Already Filed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Recommendation that a national constitutional convention be called and that delegates from the 48 states decide whether the Eighteenth Amendment should be repealed, modified or left undisturbed, will be made by President Hoover's law enforcement commission, according to a copyright story published in the Washington Herald today.

At the suggestion of Judge Kenneth MacIntosh, of Seattle, a member of the commission, Chairman Wickersham and his associates have delved into the records and discovered that 29 states have petitioned Congress to call a constitutional convention, the Herald story stated.

BELIEVED BINDING

One of the questions with which the commission has wrestled for several weeks is whether these 29 state petitions which were sent to Congress between 1899 and 1911, and demanding a constitutional convention to adopt an amendment for the popular election of senators are still "virile" and binding on these states.

It is admitted there is room for doubt whether a petition of this kind remains in effect indefinitely; but members of the commission have been assured by constitutional lawyers that the weight of authority is that it does, and that regardless of how many years may intervene to get the necessary number of states to pass the petition, it is mandatory upon Congress as soon as the necessary two-thirds have come through to order a convention.

DRY LAW LOOPHOLE

Most of these petitions now on file at the capitol provided in addition to petitioning for action in the direct election of senators that the convention pass on "such other amendments as may come before it."

This method of amending the constitution has never been employed. It was generally believed up to a few weeks ago, the Herald story declares, that the only way for Congress to propose an amendment was to submit it to state legislatures for ratification. Judge MacIntosh, however, discovered that Article 5 of the Constitution makes it mandatory upon Congress to call a constitutional convention at the request of two-thirds of the states, which would be 32 states.

The action of three-fourths of the delegates to the convention would be all that would be necessary to repeal or modify any part of the Constitution, including the Eighteenth Amendment, according to Article 5, MacIntosh pointed out.

POPULAR REFERENDUM

Inasmuch as the delegates would be elected from their respective states with regard to their declaration as to whether they would vote in the convention for or against modification or repeal, their election would be tantamount to a popular referendum on prohibition.

If it be determined by constitutional authorities that the demands of the 29 tates are still "virile" and binding, only three more state legislatures would have to petition Congress to bring about a constitutional convention.

Among the states which have not yet petitioned Congress for a convention are New York, Massachusetts, Maryland and Rhode Island, all of which are strongly opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment, and would send delegates to vote for its modification or repeal.

The flames, which illuminated the neighborhood were brought under control within an hour and confined to a loft behind a large frame sign in front of the building. The structure is occupied by Simonetti & Co., produce merchants, at 1700 Penn avenue and the Alessandria Sausage Company at 1702-04 Penn avenue. Penn avenue traffic was halted for more than an hour. Street cars were re-routed through Liberty avenue.

MT. OLIVER BLAZE

A two-story frame storage building at Sherman street and School way, Mt. Oliver, was destroyed by fire early today at a loss of $4,000, according to Battalion Chief John Frazier, of the Pittsburgh Fire Department. The city company was called out when Mt. Oliver firemen believed the blaze would spread to adjoining buildings.

5 FLEE FLAMES

John Seebacher, his wife and three children who reside at 106 Sherman street, adjoining the blazing structure, left their home when flames threatened their residence. Seebacher discovered the fire and turned in the alarm. He and members of his family then turned a small garden hose on the side of their building, which was scorched by the flames.

The storage house is owned by B. J. Johnson. He formerly was in the bottling business and the building contained bottles and straw coverings. The building had not been used for some time.

East McKeesport Dairy Farm Hit by Fire

Six persons were forced to flee to safety when fire destroyed a dwelling on the Phillip Maser Dairy farm, 1½ miles east of East McKeesport, early today. Volunteer firemen from East McKeesport, Wall and Wilmerding succeeded in saving a second residence, a milk house and two barns in which were 50 head of cattle.

The dwelling destroyed was occupied by employes of the farm, all of whom were asleep when a neighborhood boy discovered the flames and sounded an alarm.

The fire was believed by firemen to have been caused by an overheated stove. The loss was estimated at $3,500.

$4,500 Fire Sweeps Braddock Synagogue

Braddock firemen battled three and a half hours early today before extinguishing flames which threatened to destroy the synagogue of the Congregation Ahavath Achim, Sixth street, near Margaretta avenue, Braddock. The loss was estimated at $4,500 by Fire Capt. Michael Sabol, but members of the congregation said the amount might be higher due to the damage caused to equipment.

The fire was discovered in the basement of the edifice, a frame structure, the flames spreading upward through the rear of the synagogue to the roof. The fire was believed by Capt. Sabol to have started from an overheated furnace.

Firemen saved adjoining frame buildings.

Raskob Willing To Help G. O. P. Regime OUT

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Democrats are going to cooperate with the administration.

We can't stand much more of that Republican prosperity.

Democrats are willing to bury their politics. That's an old habit with them. It happens every four years.

Big bankers of both parties realize it is no time to squabble when the wolves are staging a rodeo in the vestibule.

Mr. Raskob is perfectly willing to help this administration out.

But the administration doesn't want to be assisted in that direction.

It's a smart move by the Democrats. And when the Democrats make a smart move it proves there is a first time for everything.

We don't think that Andy Mellon will accept any assistance.

But the rest of the government will operate with a Democratic line and a Republican backfield.

And 1932 is only a pebble's parabola away. That's why the Democrats are going to help the administration.

Why should a man throw rocks at the hot house in which his own flowers are just starting to bud?

War Obligations Must Be Met, Coolidge States

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 11.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

We are celebrating the twelfth anniversary of Armistice Day. As the war recedes into the past the material loss becomes more apparent. The destruction of life, the maimed and the orphaned reaching many millions, the loss of scores of billions of property, the crushing debts and taxation and the human misery of the time which will be projected into the distant future, reveal what a crime it was to permit such a catastrophe to envelope the world. No nation profited by it.

Calvin Coolidge

If there was any gain it must be bought for in spiritual values. Even those appear to be diminishing. The unselfish patriotic fervor of that day has suffered a relapse. Instead of a willingness to give all for one's country there is too much disposition in the world to avoid meeting all the different kinds of national obligations here and abroad imposed by the war. People should realize that they cannot be avoided. In some way they will have to be discharged. The nations can only recover from the war by a continuous exhibition of the spirit of sacrifice which those terrible times produced. Unless the increased moral power then created is preserved the war will be a total loss.

WAR PLOT LAID TO FRANCE

the prime mover in the plot. His associates, three of them educators and the others engineers, are charged with having formed a central committee of the so-called Industrial party in the interests of the intrigue.

The alleged Russian leaders, who will be tried on charges of high treason for which the punishment is death, are alleged to have implicated more than 200 others in confessions of their parts in the plot.

The indictment charges that they have been working for several years to disorganize industry, foment discontent among the people, and otherwise to prepare the way for a counter-revolution. Actual military force was to have been applied last summer, the indictment reads, but because of difficulties between France and Italy, and because of the uncertainty of German support, this move was postponed to 1931.

POINCARE, BRIAND NAMED

The alleged confessions were said to have named Poincare and Briand as the leading supporters of the plot abroad, and the indictment charges that the scheme was controlled from Paris, where financial arrangements and espionage were directed by a "trade industrial committee" composed of exiled Russian financiers, who were said to have received a million gold rubles for their cause in the past year, through figures named in the indictment as "certain rich officials of a certain French institution in Moscow."

The orfly "French institution" in Moscow is the French embassy. The alleged confessions refer to officials of the "institution" only by initials such as "A", "M", and "R". These officials, the indictment charges, formed an active liaison between the committee in Paris and the leaders of the plot in Moscow.

PLOT DETAILED

In the confession, which Ramsin was said to have made, details of the plot were disclosed.

There was to have been an "incident" on the Rumanian border, as a result of which Rumania was to have declared war. Her ally, Poland, also was to have declared war, and other countries were to follow their example.

The French were to provide supplies of arms and ammunition, and Great Britain was to send her fleet into the Black Sea and the Baltic, taking over the Crimea and Leningrad, while an army of 600,000 led by the former Russian General Loukomsky, would march on Moscow.

The plotters, it was said, figured that the army would number 1,000,000 men through rapid enlistment of discontented peasants on the advance toward Moscow.

The new government, according to the confession, was virtually chosen in advance. Ramsin or Miliukov, a former minister in the Kerensky government, was to be premier of a "bourgeois democratic republic."

The White Russian general, Deniken, or Lukomsky, minister of war, and Tarle, the Russian academician, foreign minister.

In return for her assistance, the confession said, Britain was to receive control of the Caucasian oil fields and other valuable concessions were to have been distributed among France and other nations.

ALLIED NATIONS HONOR DEAD

bareheaded in their places for the two minutes of silence.

The captain and crew of the giant German seaplane DO-X, riding gently at anchor off Calshot, England, in waters where 12 years ago no German craft would have dared show itself, joined in commemoration of the end of the war. They stood bareheaded on one of the ship's floats, the flag of the German republic flying at half staff behind them.

PERSHING FOR PEACE

The chief of all American fighting men in France during the war, Gen. John J. Pershing, spoke from his office at Washington and said:

"May there never be another war."

Secretary of War Hurley and Gen. Charles P. Summerall expressed the hope for tranquility and for the maintenance, as the secretary said, of the "principles of freedom, justice and democracy which have been worth fighting for."

ARMEICA IN TRIBUTE

America celebrated the day with exercises, parades and gatherings in city and hamlet with men of the army and navy joining.

Against a background of peace at Geneva, Hugh S. Gibson, representing the United States, expressed to the preparatory commission on disarmament his country's unalterable opposition to any limitation of armament through a method of budgetary restriction.

Albert, King of the Belgians, laid a wreath at the monument to the war dead of his country, and in nearly all of England coat lapels bloomed with a Flanders' poppy emblem, to aid the veterans' fund.

Pittsburghers Get Reserve Commissions

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps were issued by the War Department to the following Pennsylvanians: Glenn H. Cornell, Sharon, first lieutenant, engineers; Leopold W. Depuy, Pittsburgh, colonel, field artillery; Harry Epstein, Pittsburgh, captain, medical corps; Edward M. Sarraf, Pittsburgh, captain, coast artillery; Herbert R. Watson, Mt. Lebanon, first lieutenant, field artillery; Joshua C. Whetzel, Pittsburgh, major, chemical warfare; John G. Wittman, Jr., Pittsburgh, first lieutenant, engineers.

Hairdresser Accused By Children Held

Ona Bishop, 22, Negro hairdresser in a beauty shop at 801 Warrington avenue, was held for court by Magistrate T. D. Jones in Morals Court today. Two 14-year-old South Hills high school girls testified that Bishop had acted improperly when they visited the shop at various times. One said he had threatened her.

Irigoyen Shifted To New Prison Ship

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 11.—(INS.)—Former President Hipolito Irgoyen, still held prisoner by the new Argentine government, has been transferred from the cruiser Gen. Belgrano to the cruiser Buenos Aires. His attorneys are still attempting to effect his release on a writ of habeas corpus.

Boston Drug Raid Foiled by 'Leak'

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—(INS.)—Twenty policemen, armed with riot guns, tear gas bombs, sledges, axes and flood lights, and led by Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman and Supt. Michael H. Crowley, swooped down on Boston's Chinatown on what was supposed to be the biggest and most spectacular series of drug raids ever conducted in Boston.

The squad emerged with $30 worth of drugs and three Chinese, arrested on suspicion. Commissioner Hultman today blamed a "leak" for the failure of the raids to net a large amount of drugs and many arrests.

$1,000 Fire Damages Crafton Residence

Fire of undetermined origin late last night damaged the home of John Eckles, 225 Ewing road, Crafton. Eckles, his wife and his brother, Charles, were in the house at the time the blaze broke out.

Fire Chief William Utz estimated the loss at $1,000.

Soda Fizz Successful As Pneumonia Remedy

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—The administration of soda fizz, a mixture of oxygen and carbon dioxide, through the common inhalator is the latest contribution toward the war on pneumonia.

Matthew S. Sloan, president of the New York Edison Company and associated companies, announced yesterday that the new treatment had been turned over to the medical profession. It had been used in 127 cases involving Edison employes, he said, and of 85 patients treated in preliminary stages 70 had recovered.

The experiments were based on research carried out by Dr. Yandell Henderson, of Yale University. While the method is not considered a general cure for the disease, it is believed to be a valuable aid.

Although the treatment of pneumonia with pure oxygen has been used for years, leading physicians said this was the first organized attempt to mix the two gases as a remedy. Some expressed skepticism on the grounds that the number of cases in which it had been used was too small for evaluation.

Dr. J. J. Wittmer, head of the medical department of the Edison company, said the method still was in the experimental stage and should not be considered as a positive cure.

Teacher, 70, School Blaze Heroine, Dies in Fire

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Miss Sarah Bleakley, the oldest school teacher in the city, once marshaled 2,500 pupils from flames to safety but she couldn't save her own life in a gas stove blaze.

While she was cooking in her upper East Side apartment, her clothes caught fire last night and she collapsed from burns and smoke. She died in a hospital.

Three of her pets perished with her. A Pomeranian dog died of suffocation and two cats were trapped in the blazing kitchen. A second Pomeranian and another cat were in the front of the house and were saved.

Miss Bleakley, who was 70 and had been a teacher for 49 years, was given a medal by a newspaper for her heroism in a fire in 1908. Smelling smoke while in class, she quietly wrote a note to the principal and the school fire drill was sounded, sending the 2,500 boys and girls to the street without a trace of panic.

ence in the Washington auditorium.

Mr. Hoover appraised at some length the progress that has been made in promotion of peace since the war 12 years ago. He cited the Kellogg pact for the outlawry of war, in which 58 nations have now joined; our own arbitration treaties with virtually all the nations of the world; the setting up of such institutions as the League of Nations and the World Court, and the London naval treaty.

PERMANENCE ASSURED

In connection with the court, Mr. Hoover merely said that "its permanence is assured and from it there is steadily growing a body of precedents, decisions and acceptance of law in the formulation of which we should have a part."

He made no mention of his own immediate plans of re-submitting the court issue to the senate, where a controversy awaits it.

While he emphasized that it is America's duty to co-operate with the rest of the world in the preservation of peace, the President also emphasized that the basis of this co-operation must be essentially different from that of other nations.

SERVICE TO PEACE

He said:

"The security of our geographic situation, the traditional freedom from entanglements in the involved diplomacy of Europe, and our disinterestness enable us to give a different and in many ways a more effective service to peace.

"The nations of Europe, bordered as they are, by the age-old dangers of which we in the western hemisphere have little appreciation, beset as they are by long-inherited fears, believe that they must subscribe to methods which in the last resort will use force to compel nations to abide by their agreements to settle controversies by pacific means. We, in our great state of safety and independence, should make no criticism of their conclusions which arise from their necessities.

FREE FROM ALLIANCES

"But we believe that our contribution can best be made in these emergencies, when nations fail to keep their undertakings of pacific settlement of disputes, by our good offices and helpfulness free from any advance commitment or entanglement as to the character of our action.

"The purpose of our government is to co-operate with others, to use our friendly offices, and, short of any implication of the use of force, to use every friendly effort and all good will to maintain the peace of the world.

'BLESSINGS OF PEACE'

"The war that ended on this day 12 years ago taught us one thing, if nothing else, and that is the blessing of peace. When we look back upon its splendid valor and heroism then displayed, when we remember the magnificent energies poured forth by young and old, when we recall the marvelous exercise of the greatest virtues that glorify the human race—unselfishness, self-sacrifice, co-operation, both by men and women—we are looking not upon qualities which war creates, but rather upon the traits of the human race which war makes seem more vivid by contrast with its own horrors.

EFFORTS AGAINST WAR

"These same qualities are exercised, but are unsung and unheralded in time of piece. Those who died displaying them would have displayed them living, and would have wrought their fruits into the enduring fabric of our peaceful destiny.

"We can only pledge ourselves, in honor of their memory, to the task of making ever more unlikely that our youth hereafter shall be denied its opportunity to devote its idealism and its energies to the constructive arts of peace."

FILES OF VETERANS FOLLOWING BAND AND SCORES OF COLORS AS LINE OF MARCH CAME DOWN FIFTH AVENUE, CROSSED GRANT STREET

cieties of Allegheny County, started at 10:30 from Dinwiddie street and Fifth avenue, passed down Fifth to Liberty, to Sixth street, over Sixth Street Bridge to Federal street, to Stockton avenue, past the reviewing stand in Ridge avenue, to Irwin avenue, and disbanded in Western avenue.

COLOFUL PARADE

The parade was one of the most colorful ever seen in Pittsburgh. Many of the veteran organizations and bugle corps were arrayed in special uniforms.

The rain, fog and smoke hung as a low pall over the streets.

Ben. R. Marshall, assistant superintendent of police, and a squad of 16 mounted policemen, acted as honor escort. Next came the parade commanders and visiting military notables. Members of the G. A. R., some Spanish War veterans and disabled soldiers of the World War, were in automobiles.

War nurse units were given a big ovation, but there was little cheering as the service outfits passed, each headed by a band or bugle corps.

In the downtown canyons, each building rained its shower of confetti and colored streamers on the heads of the marchers.

GUNS BOOM SALUTE

Following the minute pause in memory of the dead, the guns on Monument Hill thundered a 21-gun salute.

Among the notables here for the celebration were:

Maj. Gen. E. G. Peyton, of Atlanta, Ga., former commander of the 320th Infantry.

Maj. Gen. William G. Price, Jr., Philadelphia, commander of the 28th Division, N. G. P., former commander of the 53rd Field Artillery Brigade, 28th Division.

Brig. Gen. Frank S. Cocheu, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, commander of the 3rd Infantry Brigade, Regular Army, and former commander of the 319th Infantry Regiment, 80th Division, composed of Pittsburgh troops.

Maj. Gen. Charles H. Muir, Baltimore, former commander of the 28th Division, A. E. F.

Maj. Gen. George S. Gibbs, Washington, D. C., chief signal officer, U. S. Army.

Maj. George E. Parker, Jr., D. S. C., Baltimore, Md., senior vice commander Army and Navy Legion of Valor.

Maj. Edwin H. Cooper, D. S. C., Boston, chief of staff, Army and Navy Legion of Valor.

CRUMP HEADS PARADE

In the reviewing stand, beside the military visitors, were Maj. A. B. Hay, commander of the Union Veteran Legic ; Col. Harry Frye, Air Corps Reserve; John S. Herron, president of city council; E. G. Lang, director of the department of public works, and Coroner W. J. McGregor.

Banks, public buildings and numerous business houses were closed today to allow their employes to join the thousands participating in the day's events.

Following the parade, City Post acted as the American Legion and Baird Atwood Post, V. F. W., held a veterans' luncheon in the Nixon restaurant. Another luncheon also was given to the city's guests in the William Penn Hotel. At 2 p. m., Company E, of the 111th Infantry, met for a luncheon at the Plaza restaurant. This afternoon was spent by the veterans in visiting the Marine and Aspinwall hospitals, in reunion gatherings and theater parties.

Dedication of the Wilkinsburg Airport by the John M. Clark Post No. 315, American Legion, which was to have taken place today, was postponed until November 22 and 23.

SCHOOL DEDICATED

Another feature for this afternoon was the dedication of a reconstructed 135-year-old log schoolhouse in Mt. Lebanon Township Park. Headed by the Mt. Lebanon school band, the American Legion and borough scouts paraded to the parw, where H. R. Haines, president of the Lions Club, made the presentation of the school. Chancellor John G. Bowman, of the University of Pittsburgh, was the principal speaker.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis will be the speaker at a banquet of World War veterans this evening in the Penn-McKee Hotel, McKeesport.

BANQUETS ARRANGED

At 6:30 p. m. veterans of the 53rd Field Artillery will banquet in the Fort Pitt Hotel. Eightieth Division veterans and auxiliary members will dine at the Plaza restaurant at 6:45 p. m., the dinner being followed by an entertainment and dance. W. Ralph McNulty Post of the V. F. W. will hold an entertainment and banquet at Webster Hall at 7 o'clock. A dance will be held by Vesle Post, V. F. W. at 8 p. m. in Ruthenian Hall and at 8:15 p. m. the 111th Infantry will dance at the General Logan Armory, Oakland.

The largest ball of the evening will be held by the American Legion in the William Penn Hotel, beginning at 9 o'clock and continuing until 1 a. m. This will be the concluding event of the day's program.

War Veteran Survived 22 Bullets; Parades Here

One of the World War's most grievously wounded victims lived to come home and today joined his "buddies" in the Armistice Day parade.

He is John Kelly, of 2113 Brighton road, who took 22 machine gun bullets in his young body, was captured by the Germans, went through five years hospitalization, and today was a happy participant in the twelfth celebration of the day of peace.

Kelly joined the Fifth Marines in Pittsburgh when only 17. At Chateau Thierry, in the Argonne, he was sent with a detail to quiet a machine gun nest. Twenty-two bullets riddled his body and he fell into German hands. After nearly a year in German hospitals he was able to return to America, and spent four years in hospitals here.

His indomitable will to live gave him the right to join with comrades in the fetes held here since Sunday.

Auto Victim Disappears On Way to Hospital

Driving to the Columbia Hospital early today with a man whom he had found wandering near the scene of an automobile accident at Bigelow boulevard, near Seventeenth street, J. Harold Ake, of 528 Hill avenue, Wilkinsburg, discovered upon arrival at the hospital that the passenger disappeared.

The victim, J. S. Nycum, 35, of 108 Maple avenue, Wilkinsburg, was found a short time later lying in Penn avenue at Murtland avenue, both ankles broken. A cab driver removed him to the Pittsburgh Hospital. Inasmuch as Ake declares the man was walking when picked up in the boulevard, Nycum, police believe, was hurt when he fell from Ake's machine.

Nycum was driving an automobile in which L. M. Bair, 32, of 2822 Laketon road, Wilkinsburg, was a passenger. His machine collided with the car of Andrew C. Horning, 30, of 200 Shady Hill road, Westwood. Horning and his wife, Ada, 28, are in the Mercy Hospital. Horning suffered a broken right leg and Mrs. Horning internal injuries. Bair was cut and bruised.

Injured at Work, Sues for $15,000

Eugene Palombo, of Pittsburgh, filed a $15,000 damage suit in Federal Court against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, because of injuries he claims to have received while working for the company June 29.

His bill of complaint said that while he was employed he worked in the Twenty-eighth Street Yards as an oiler, he slipped on the floor of a pit and suffered concussion of the brain and other injuries. He charges the company with negligence because he had not been warned of the slippery condition of the pit.

FLIGHT OF DO-X USHERS IN NEW WORLD ERA

Dr. Dornier, Designer, Tells Lady Hay Flying Boat Vision Assured Success

EXCLUSIVE

By LADY DRUMMOND HAY.
Special Correspondent Aboard the DO-X for the Trans-Atlantic Flight.

ABOARD THE DO-X, CALSHOT AIRDROME, Southampton, England, Nov. 11. — Across the North Sea from Amsterdam to Southampton like a flash, with 21 passengers traveling luxuriously on the largest air liner in the world! And soon we will be across the Atlantic in New York!

As the DO-X swung out over the rough sea which lashed at the Zeebrugge Mole, speeding along at 90 miles an hour through the winter sunshine 900 feet above the ocean and the rocking ships on its surface, Dr. Claude Dornier, designer of the DO-X, remarked to me:

"This is the beginning of a new era of world communication."

DORNIER SEES SUCCESS

Dr. Dornier is a happy man today. He sees in the success of this first open sea crossing by his colossal flying boat the promise of fulfillment of his life's dream and ambition. Frau Dornier is sharing it all with him; she is aboard, sitting almost silent in the intensity of her emotion.

With Frau Dornier is Mrs. Adolph Burgerhout, the wife of the Dutch representative of the Dornier works. We three are the only women among the 21 passengers.

I, too, am thrilled, happy to be again participating in an historic pioneering triumph in the air. This recalls my emotions on my first long Zeppelin flight in 1928. Confident elation and the undisguised joy of triumph prevail on the bridge, the navigation and engine rooms of this unique "air marine" craft, reminiscent of those memorable pioneer adventures in the Graf Zeppelin. Another similarity is the utter feeling of security and comfort in the passenger deck.

CONVERSE EASILY

There is practically no movement, and much less noise than I expected from the 12 motors roaring above us. We can converse comfortably and easily.

Seven nationalities were represented on the personnel list.

Italy and Jugoslavia, hostile brothers nationally, fraternized amicably on the DO-X. Their representatives were Majs. Custosa and Brenta of the Italian air ministry and Maj. Krakow of the Jugoslavian air ministry, and they are among the keenest observers aboard.

Maj. Giacoma Brenta is slated to command one of the two Italian ships similar to the DO-X now being completed at the Dornier works at Altenrhein. Premier Mussolini and Air Minister Balboa of Italy were the first to express their confidence in these great flying ships.

When the DO-X approached England, airplanes and seaplanes, big and small, curvetted around, providing a most graceful winged escort to Southampton. At 3:38, a perfect landing brought the DO-Z to the water. As we came to the landing, Frau Dornier said to me:

"I have enjoyed every minute of it."

Frau Burgerhout, for whom today's flight was her first experience in the air, said she loved flying, but "after the DO-X, I'm likely to be spoiled for smaller aircraft."

Crowds Flock to Calshot To View Giant DO-X

CALSHOT AIRDROME, Southampton, Eng., Nov. 11.—(INS.)—Calshot, scene of the record-breaking speed exploits of the Schneider Cup racers, again was the mecca of aviation enthusiasts in Britain today as hundreds flocked down to Southampton water for a glimpse of the DO-X the mammoth German flying boat, which has successfully completed the first two stages of its flight to America.

As myriad watercraft milled about the landing stage, carrying thrilled spectators close to the towering structure of the gigantic three-decked machine, every precaution was taken by airdrome officers to prevent a recurrence of the accident which befell the ship at Amsterdam, when it was rammed by a police boat.

All watercraft, save those on official missions, were forbidden to come within touching distance of the DO-X. Heavy guards of police lined the shore opposite the spot where the air liner is moored.

Fail to Solve Street Refuse Disposal

Mayor Charles H. Kline, Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang and members of Council conferred late yesterday on the problem of disposing of the sweepings from the city streets. No definite decision was reached.

Protests have led to the abandonment of two dumps, one in Highland Park and one on Forward avenue.

CAPT. HAWKS continues to make other distinguished fliers look like estimable "has beens." He flew from Havana to New York in 8 hours 44 minutes, averaging 190 miles an hour, doing 600 miles at 210 miles an hour, not using top speed at any time.

HAWKS CAME bringing letters from Ricardo R. Lancis, brilliant editor of the Havana El Mundo and wearing a rubber life preserver jacket given to him by our ambassador, Harry F. Guggenheim. It's a jacket that every flier over water should wear, easily inflated on the way down, by parachute or otherwise.

THE GREAT imperial coronation in Abyssinia is over, and the emperor announces that the festivities have bankrupted him, and he would like to borrow $1,000,000 to build himself a fireproof palace. Americans desiring to acquire Abyssinian concessions will get bargains. There ought to be oil, or gold, or something in those hills.

The favorite of the empress, most influential woman in Abyssinia, is Frieda Haetel, German lady, simultaneously lady in waiting to the empress and her midwife.

TO THE DARK empress, who has children, the midwife perhaps gave a comforting whiff of chloroform at the right time. Anybody who wants to dine with the empress must dine with the midwife.

The diplomatic corps decided to accept the midwife when the empress is present, but not to invite her to their own parties.

TOMMY WEST danced and sang on the vaudeville stage for 27 years, always hoping that some day favorable criticisms would put him among the "headliners."

On Sunday in Philadelphia, he wrote his own last notice thus: "If anybody wants to know where I am, just tell hem that at last I'm with the big timers—Bert Williams, Jack Donahue, Caruso and the rest of the crowd."

Then he killed himself. It probably comforts many to know that time and death will take them to join the "big timers," or at least remove them from the ruck of nobodies.

MATHER AVOIDS 'MODERN' ART DISPUTES

Princeton Lecturer Says Tastes of Present Day Are Far From Uniform

By PENELOPE REDD.

Dr. Frank Jewett Mather, top man in the fine arts department of Princeton University, refused to be drawn into controversial statements in his conference on the current Carnegie International held in Carnegie Lecture Hall last night.

"Mr. Curtisser will say one painting is a fine picture. Mr. Katz will say Mr. Curtisser' fine painting is rotten. I might differ from both," said Dr. Mather as an illustration of the conflicting state of present day taste.

Penelope Redd

Admitting his adherence to the humanist's movement he said:

"Art is a social function and that is the humanist's point of view.

"The trouble with the modernists is that they were made titans by their admirers because they distorted and simplified objects there was no reason to distort. They over-emphasized ripe pears instead of monumental sibyls as did Michael Angelo. The program was fine for genuine titans but absurd for the average artist.

"I cannot for a moment regard the modernist as a culpable person, but as an unfortunate one in discarding representation. He is a product and to a certain extent a victim of circumstances.

"Instead of a standard of taste which the artist may serve and which would serve him, he finds 57 varieties of taste. Moreover, it is difficult for him to find which one of the 57 will support him."

Dr. Mather made lucid comparisons to explain his definition of the difference between the MODERN and the MODERNIST. The Modern painter is one who paints pictures having a close relationship with the actual world in which he lives, such as John Sloan. The Modernist painter is isolated and superior to actual life in his intense concern with his expression of his private interests. According to Dr. Mather, he is prone to have less and less meaning as his personality wanes and his work is obliged to speak for itself.

PICKS PRIZE WINNERS

Dr. Mather's first choice for first prize painting was Sterne's modern painting of a young colored high school student, and his second the "Woman at a Tea Table" by Bonnard. He selected both because of their technical excellence in his opinion, and their relation to contemporary life.

'GREAT' SHIRES WEDS CO-ED

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 11.—(INS.)—Art "Whataman" Shires, the Washington American League club's first baseman, and Miss Betty Greenabaum, Chicago co-ed, were married late yesterday at the studio where Shires is making a series of boxing pictures.

Before the ceremony, Shires, the "shrinking violet" of baseball, admitted he had encountered a situation he was unable to handle alone. He telephoned the marriage license bureau:

"I, that is to say we, are on our way down there now to get a license. Have a judge handy—getting married is one of the few things I need help on."

At the license bureau, Shires was accompanied by his adoring bride-to-be, a 19-year-old University of Wisconsin student, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Percival, the latter known as Kate Campbell on the screen. After receiving the license Shires announced:

"Everything is jake. You know, the only thing I don't like about this wedding business is that somebody else is called the best man."

GUNMEN ROB 6, BREAK INTO 8 HOMES

5 Dwellings, Y. M. C. A. Branch Looted in Knoxville; Seek Footpads in Street Attacks

Bandits who held up six pedestrians in various sections of the city last night and entered eight homes and the Hilltop branch, Y. M. C. A., to take money and jewelry were being sought by police and detectives today.

Five homes and the Y. M. C. A. branch were entered, according to police reports, climaxing a series of petty burglaries in the Knoxville district.

From the Y. M. C. A. candy, chewing gum and cigarets valued at $16.50 were taken. Dwellings entered included those of Dr. James E. Stuart, 216 Suncrest street, $12; Mrs. Ella Egy, 203 McKinley avenue, $4; Theodore Schmitt, 209 McKinley avenue, overcoat valued at $50. The homes of James Bluffey, 222 Suncrest street, and Mrs. McLaughlin, 104 Roman street, were ransacked, but nothing taken.

Frank Kush, of 1926 Larkins way, was robbed of $64 by two men while he was walking down the Brady street steps. The pair knocked him down and took the money from his pockets.

ATTACKED BY FIVE

Attacked by five men in Ontario street, Woods Run, Walter Ciswoski, of 1544 Forsythe street, was robbed of $14. He was returning home from work when confronted by the thugs.

James Woods, of 418 North Highland avenue, was robbed of $22.50 by a man who slugged him on the head at Windsor and Welfer streets. Woods furnished police with a good description of his assailant.

Edward Phares, of 1222 Arch street, was robbed of $23 by a thug who stopped him in Liberty avenue, near Ferry street., Phares told police.

Two highwaymen obtained $7 from T. J. Sarran, of 5191 Harvard street, when they stopped him in Baum boulevard at Negley avenue early today. Neither of the men had guns, but they threw Sarren to the street and searched his clothing.

FOILS HIGHWAYMEN

Returning home early today, Calvin S. Perrin, of 7111 Monticello street, decided he might be an easy victim for holdup men. He then took his money and hid it in his hat. A moment or two later he was confronted by two armed highwaymen, who demanded his valuables. The men searched his clothing and left without finding the hidden cash.

A. A. Denney, of 6848 Meade street, reported that burglars ransacked his home last night and stole jewelry valued $68 and clothing valued at $50. They gained entrance by jimmying a rear first floor window.

Burglars also ransacked the home of J. H. Rodeniser at 6418 Jackson street, gaining entrance by jimmying a first floor window. Mr. Rodeniser was unable to give police a list of the stolen articles until a further check has been made.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hoover, of the Bellefonte Apartments, 5500 Elmer street, reported to police that a sneak thief had entered her apartment and stolen a purse containing $5.

The robery is said to have occurred between three and six o'clock this morning.

The money was taken from the cash register. Weisenberger said he kept the cash on hand to cash checks for workmen who patronize his store.

MOTHER FIGHTS FOR CHILDREN

Mrs. Anna M. Mason, 4723 Baum boulevard, seeking the custody of her children, Geraldine, 13, and William, 7, procured a writ of habeas corpus in Common Pleas Court directed to her former husband, William Mason. A hearing was fixed for November 18 by Judge Harry H. Rowand.

The couple was married June 14, 1907, and divorced in December, 1928, Mrs. Mason said. She averred Mason lived at 1007 Park street, McKeesport, with the two children after the divorce and that on November 1 he left there, taking the children with him. They are badly neglected and are not in proper hands, Mrs. Mason declared.

Anti-Horse Thief League to Fight Roost Raiders

FLYING BROKER SETS RECORD

COLON, Canal Zone, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—After resting here a few days, Capt. Roy W. Ammel, who yesterday completed the first non-stop flight from New York to France Field, expects to attempt a non-stop flight to Chicago, where he is a broker.

His first concern, he said here today, is to get back to his business in Chicago, but after that he will plan a trans-oceanic flight for next spring, probably to Paris or Rome.

Capt. Ammel estimated that he covered 3,198 miles on the 24-hour 34-minute flight from New York, weather conditions forcing wide detours. The direct route between New York and the Canal Zone is not quite 2,300 miles.

Capt. Ammel's little monoplane, the Blue Flash, averaged about 130 miles per hour. He flew over Washington, Atlanta, Jacksonville, Miami, Cuba and Nicaragua.

U. S. DIPLOMAT KILLED IN FALL

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Edward P. Lowry, second secretary of the United States embassy here, was killed early today when he fell from the stairs on the third floor of the American Club, where he had gone to attend an American Legion meeting.

Lowry lost his footing as he was leaving the meeting shortly after midnight.

He formerly was a major in the Persian gendarmerie, an officer in the A. E. F., and a post-war colonel in the Lithuanian army.

He was transferred to the diplomatic service in Mexico City a year and a half ago.

'Abie's Irish Rose' Author Loses Suit

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(INS.)—A decision whereby Anne Nichols, author of "Abie's Irish Rose," lost her fight to collect $3,000,000 from a movie company on the ground that one of the concern's productions was plagiarized from her play, was considered a precedent in some quarters today because of its liberal treatment of copyright infringement.

The Circuit Court of Appeals ruling held that the defendants borrowed no more from Miss Nichols than the prototypes of these figures have contained "for many decades."

Lost Rubber Maker Sought in Woods

JACKMAN, Me., Nov. 11.—(INS.)—With a reward of $500 posted for the finder of Mitchell B. Kaufman, Boston and Framingham rubber manufacturer, missing in the woods here since last Wednesday, bloodhounds today were taken into the trackless wilderness in an effort to pick up the trail, while officials remained convinced the missing man was dead. Two airplanes were also being used to scour the dense woodland from the air.

LOTTERY THEFT ADMITTED FAKE

The reported holdup of an alleged numbers writing headquarters on the second floor of 729 Wood street, Wilkinsburg, last Friday, was a fake, Vincent Tulino, 40, charged with being the proprietor, admitted at a hearing before Burgess William M. Turner.

Tulino ran to the Wilkinsburg Police station with the story that he and his two assistants had been locked in a cupboard by two bandits, after $300 had been taken from his pockets. He was later arrested when police found adding machines and lottery equipment in the place, they reported.

Before Burgess Turner last night Tulino was unable to describe the supposed holdup men. Tulino denied conducting a lottery headquarters, but was fined $100 by Turner who said:

"I intend to stop you or anyone else who sells numbers in this borough. I have been accused of protecting you fellows. I'll show you and the rest I am not."

Doll Lady Invites Girls To Meet 'Tickletoes' Baby

By THE SUN-TELEGRAPH DOLL LADY.

Dear Little Girls:

Of course I knew you would all be glad to hear from me, but I really didn't expect to be swamped with letters from my little friends. When I came down to the headquarters in the Sun-Telegraph Building this morning my desk was stacked with letters and I had to employ a lot of assistants to open them. And it will be late tonight before I get to the last letter.

Every letter will be answered because I do not want to disappoint a single girl who wants to get one of my wonder "Tickletoes" dollies. And let me tell you right here that they are truly marvelous. That's why I want every little girl in Pittsburgh and vicinity to get one.

At the outset let me tell you that they are going to be so easy to get that there will be no excuse for any girl not to have a "Tickletoes" doll for a chum long before Christmas.

And now just a few lines about "Tickletoes," the doll you'll love just like a sister. In the first place she's beautifully dressed, she's flexible—that is you can bend her any way you want. "Tickletoes" has three voices. Her legs are of durable rubber. Pinch the right leg and you hear one voice, pinch the other and you hear the second voice; lay her down and she crys, roll her over and she goes to sleep. She can clasp her hands, suck her thumb, has lifelike toes and fingers, she's unbreakable and just about as big a dolly as you would want to take care of. My "Tickletoes" is always happy, smiling and bright-eyed.

Now, of course, every little girl in this big city and vicinity will want a "Tickletoes" dolly for a playmate and I want every little girl to have one. No, I am not actually giving them away, but I am making them so easy to get that you will surely be among the first to have a "Tickletoes" for a chum. Let's hope so anyway.

Now, little girls, if you want a wonder "Tickletoes" all for your own, write me a little note, giving your name and address and I will tell you by return mail how you can be made the happiest girl in Pittsburgh. If you can't write, ask mother or "Dad" to do it for you, but don't wait until all of my "Tickletoes" dollies are gone. Write today. Address your letter to the SUN-TELEGRAPH DOLL LADY, PITTSBURGH, PA., and you'll get a letter telling just what to do to get one of my dollies for Christmas—or before Christmas, if you want it.

Goodby for today, but don't forget to write your letter to the

$75,646 STREET JOBS AWARDED

Contracts aggregating $75,646 have been awarded to the Department of Public Works, according to Director Edward G. Lang. The largest is for the improvement of Shore avenue from Manchester avenue to Scotland street, which went to Booth and Flinn Company on a bid of $55,978.

Other improvements for which contracts were awarded are Wilkins avenue from Dallas avenue to Willard street, Schubert street from Spring Garden avenue to where it meets the same street again, Kaborama way from Maude street to Falk avenue and Swanson street from East street to Middle street.

DESTRUCTION OF BEER ASKED

A forfeiture libel against 5,760 bottles of beer was filed in Federal Court by Robert N. Krause, deputy prohibition administrator, in which he asks that the beer be condemned and ordered destroyed. The beer was seized at Locust Point, Beaver County, November 3, while being transported in two trucks. John Daugh, of New Kensington, and Edward Harris, of Pittsburgh, alleged truck drivers, were arrested.

The court granted a rule, returnable December 1, on any possible claimants to show cause why the beer should not be condemned and forfeited to the government.

COMPENSATION RULING UPSET

Compensation for the death of an adult son was awarded Peter Macheska, Sr., 49, in an order handed down in Common Pleas Court by Judge Ambrose B. Reid, overruling a decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board.

The son, Peter Macheska, Jr., 22, a miner employed by the Pittsburgh Coal Company at its Warden mine, was injured in an accident January 30, resulting in death February 4. It was testified the larger part of his earnings, averaging about $24 weekly, went to the support of the father, a widower. The sole question was that of the dependency of the older man on his son's earnings.

The referee allowed compensation at $5 weekly for 300 weeks. This was reversed by the Compensation Board. The grant is now allowed by the court ruling. The reversal is said to be one of few such instances.

DECOY LETTER TRAPS SUSPECT

William Duncan, alias Bill Parker, 40, Negro, of Davis avenue, North Side, was arrested yesterday by postal inspectors on charges of writing obscene letters to women on the North Side and in Bellevue.

The recipients had reported the letters to Postoffice Inspector George V. Craighead. Using the name of one of the women, Craighead replied, inviting the writer to call at her home in Bellevue.

When Duncan arrived there he found two postoffice inspectors awaiting him. In his pocket was found the "decoy" letter, the officers reported. An information charging misuse of the mails was made against the prisoner. The inspectors reported Duncan carried a paper indicating he was on probation from the Ohio State Reformatory.

ANTI-DRYS PUSH REPEAL FIGHT

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11—(AP.)—Plans to carry forward "with renewed zeal" the fight for the repeal of the state and national prohibition laws were outlined at a meeting of the Pennsylvania division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

Robert K. Cassatt, chairman of the organization, declared a vote of nearly 1,000,000 polled by John M. Stemphill, Democratic-Liberal candidate, in the recent gubernatorial contest against Gifford Pinchot, Republican, had convinced the anti-dry group that Pennsylvania was "in reality in the anti-dry column."

Cassatt announced steps would be taken at once to build up strong local units of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment throughout the state in congressional districts or by counties. A telegram was sent to Charles Dorrance, of Scranton, chairman of the Liberal party, congratulating him on his leadership in the campaign.

Hemphill was a guest at the meeting.

Bar Applicants Must Be Residents

TREDWAY PENS GENEALOGY

After 11 years of research, Attorney William T. Tredway, 1034 State avenue, Coraopolis, has completed and published a history of the Tredway family.

According to the genealogy, Tredway's history dates back to the time of the Saxons, Angles and Jutes, warring tribe of the fourth century. The family was established by Thomas Tredway during the reign of Henry V., 1432-1464, and was prominent in England's social and civic life.

The family became established in America, reads the history, with the coming of Crispen Tredway in 1700. He operated a tobacco plantation near Baltimore, Md.

Attorney Tredway visited England in 1926 to gather data necessary for the completion of the volume, is one of 88 complete family genealogies ever published in the United States, according to Mr. Tredway.

Dangerous Gassy Stomach Torture Ends Quick

"I am pleased and glad to say and tell you that a package of ACIDINE helped me quicker than anything else I ever tried," says William Kurtz of Windgap, Pa. "I will tell you there are a good many people killed with gas in the stomach. If you have a weak heart it is dangerous. I tell others about this—to get ACIDINE and try it."

Just another of thousands who are astonished at the way this new prescription ACIDINE succeeds when other known remedies fail. The reason is it is different from other medicines. ACIDINE contains Japtase, which, in laboratory tests, digested and filters its own weight of certain heavy starchy foods. ACIDINE neutralizes burning acid, soothes irritated stomach and intestinal linings, helps end acidosis.

Eat, drink all you want. When sour stomach, gas pain, heartburn, bad taste, heavy feeling, short breath, dizziness, belching, nervousness, colds, grouchiness and sleeplessness trouble you, take ACIDINE. Results guaranteed—if not delighted, smiling refunds money. Get it from your druggist today.

"PROGRESS"

Says

LUCIUS BOOMER

President, Hotel Waldorf-Astoria Corporation
The Savarins, Inc.
Louis Sherry, Inc.
The Sherry-Netherland Corp.

"The vision which we are realizing in the planning and construction of the new Waldorf—is a New Way of Living. Literally, we intend that the new Waldorf-Astoria will mean to this era what the old Waldorf-Astoria did to its generation. It is interesting to note that in your process of manufacture, utilizing the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of LUCKY STRIKE tobacco, you are actuated by a similar impelling spirit of progress. Like the Waldorf, you are not content with your record of success but go on to significant new accomplishments."

Lucius Boomer

Consistent with its policy of laying the facts before the public, The American Tobacco Company has invited Mr. Lucius Boomer to review the reports of the distinguished men who have witnessed LUCKY STRIKE'S famous Toasting Process. The statement of Mr. Boomer appears on this page.

Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why TOASTING includes the use of the Ultra Violet Ray. LUCKY STRIKE—the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating!

PERSHING TO TALK ON RADIO TONIGHT

The Loudspeaker

Mornings Poor.
Hard on Housewife.
Corn-Husking Bee.
Van Loon Friday.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Nov. 11. — The radio magnificos continue to emphasize their evening programs to the detriment of those which they air in morning periods. It is time they paid some attention to the morning.

Louis Reid

Morning on the microphone has almost reached the zero state so far as entertainment is concerned. Endless gabbing on household topics consumes whatever time is not devoted to string trios playing hackneyed music. The mythical figure, the woman in the home, deserves a break.

Radio Men Should Do Better By Nell

The broadcasters ought to begin soon to do right by Nell, to shuffle as if they meant it their cards of entertainment, and give her something besides a recipe for fried chicken and a repetition of the frayed and yellow "traumerei." Women buy the radios. It is to them the advertisers make their chief appeal. Commercial sponsors are crying "buy now!" But they don't shout it in the morning when women are in the best mood for buying.

And if the sponsors are wondering what type of program to present let them consider a blend of high class music, high class comedy, short talks—the shorter the better—on a wide range of subjects and such old time tunes as the Pickard Family, the Crockett Mountaineers, the cowboy quartets and the Possum Hunters of Richmond, Va. present.

Comes a note from B. P. Woodbridge, N. J., regarding John J. Raskob's recent radio talk on the need of bigger and better automobile roads. Raskob, he declares, might also give some thought to the building business:

"Build more low-priced dwelling houses and decent tenements for the poor and cut rents to a decent figure. The United States right now needs 5,000,000 six-room houses and 10,000 low-rent apartment houses for the poor. Why doesn't Raskob get busy on something like that?"

M. H. Aylesworth, NBC generalissimo, believes sponsors of programs "can be trusted not to overstep the bounds in the matter of advertising."

Aylesworth is an optimist.

Corn Husking Again On Microphone

Because radio last year transformed the old-time drudgery of cornhusking into a vivid sports event, the annual national cornhusking contest will be brought to the armchairs next Friday, as the broadcasters say "ear-by-ear." It will come, as, of course, it would have to, from Norton, Kan.

Cornhusking competition has not reached the sports pages. But if speed in competition is a test for entry into the sporting columns, the boys who race down the rows of corn, hitting the bumpboards at a feverish pace, will soon be clamoring for attention.

Corn-husking as it is practised in Kansas has novelty for Eastern ears. The radio men welcome it as they welcome the spelling bees and the quoit pitching of Congress.

When Hendrick Von Loon talks from Amsterdam next Friday Americans will hear the first commercially sponsored international broadcast. No commercially sponsored period will ever come from England—not while the BBC is controlled by the government.

W. C. Handy, composer of "St. Louis Blues," has made an arrangement with the tinkling old ballad "Glow Worm" for a jazz band. "Glow Worm" continues to be favored by the maestros almost as much as when it was introduced to America 20 years ago. Alice Remsen, NBC contralto, is reviving the old comedy songs of Vesta Victoria. It is time somebody did. Radio has yet to capture Noel Coward, Britain's theater man-of-all-work.

Songs of the World War dominate the air today. From the standpoint of stirring appeal we still cast our vote for "Tiperary," with "Madelon" a close second. . . Ben Burnie, "the old maestro," has returned to the networks, but where is George Olsen?

Does your set lisp?
the letter "S" test for tone

IN speech, does your set reproduce the letter "S" distinctly, or does it sound like "TH"? This is an important tone test. If your set distorts the "S", it means that reception is faulty among the high frequencies—that you are not getting all of the enjoyment modern radio can give you from both vocal and instrumental entertainment.

Investigate the lifelike quality of the new Grebe before you buy. Your nearest Grebe dealer will willingly give you a 7-check test card which shows you how to make other tests and appraise any set from every point of view.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

IN FLANDERS FIELDS.
In Flanders Fields, the poppies blow
Between the crosses row on row,
That mark our places;
And in the sky
The larks still bravely singing fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead.
Short days ago we lived,
Felt dawn—saw sunsets glow;
Loved and were loved.
But now we lie
In Flanders Fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw the torch;
Yours be the task to hold it high—
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep,
Though poppies grow
In Flanders Fields.
—Lt. Col. McCrae.

We never read Lt. Col. McCrae's tribute to the war dead that we do not feel ourselves like the speaking voice "In Flanders Fields." We have known other Armistice Day observations never to be complete on the radio without this memorable poem being recited at least once, but tonight we do not see it listed anywhere. We cannot imagine that it will not be recited sometime during the night, so we print it here. Gen. John J. Pershing is the principal speaker of the evening over KDKA at 10:30. Steel Jamison, tenor, is to sing "There Is No Death." Other speakers include Secretary Patrick J. Hurley and Henry L. Stimson.

K-K-K-KA.

"Keep the Home Fires Burning" was probably the theme song of an impromptu celebration held by the Lawson Sisters and doughboys of the 107th Field Artillery Sunday when ex-servicemen stopped at the radio entertainers' home in Millvale. The stopover was a surprise to the girls who were discovered cooking in the kitchen. In gingham apron and carrying pancake turners, the girls came out of the house to lead the boys in singing war-time melodies. After half an hour's sing the big bus bearing the boys moved on to a memorial service with Ford Miller at the wheel.

QUESTION A DAY:

Are visitors allowed at KDKA on Sunday?—R. M. H.

Answer—Yes.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Producers of the movie, "Remote Control," had to obtain permission from the Federal Radio Commission to use the call letters "WPN." The letter combination used was authorized by the board since it is not in use by any radio station in the United States.

ADS' EXPLAINED BY SCHOOLEY

Statements that Pittsburgh banks, depositories for city funds, had been solicited in the name of City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley for advertisements in hockey program, were met today with the following statement by Mr. Schooley:

"The Fort Pitt Hockey Club, Incorporated, owns and operates the Yellow Jackets in the International Hockey League.

"A program is issued for every game, the same as for the theaters or the baseball season.

"Naturally, advertising is being solicited for this program. It is a strictly legitimate proposition. I am president of the hockey club. If my name is in any way in the solicitation, it is in that connection only.

"If anyone is using it in any other way, which I do not believe to be the case, there is no authority for such tactics, nor is anyone authorized to solicit from the Treasurer's office. This means either an employe or an outsider.

"We desire the space in this program to be sold purely on a basis of its merit as an advertising medium.

"It is up to those who are approached to reach their decisions on that basis and nothing else. If they believe they can get value in advertising from it, we will appreciate their business. If it does not appeal to them in that light, they should refuse to go in."

Here's Quick Way To Break Up a Cold

Makes You Feel Like a New Person Almost Before You Know It

THE thing to do with a cold is to break it up in a hurry—with something you know does the job: not to trifle with a lot of trick ideas and remedies. Colds are too dangerous to experiment with.

Get a box of Hill's Cascara Quinine at any drug store. Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all.

Soon that miserable, aching feeling begins to go. The cold breaks up. The poisons are moved from your system. The world looks like an altogether different place.

Those results come because Hill's goes back to first principles by going to the seat of the trouble. It's not a new-fangled fancy idea but a tried and proved way that's made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy.

Hill's costs only a few cents. Use it for quick relief after everything else you've tried has failed.

GANGSTER GIRL

By JACK LAIT

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Polack Annie, red-haired beauty of the Chicago underworld, after killing two gang leaders to avenge the slaying of her sweetheart, goes to New York and appeals for protection to Silk Freeman, a big shot racketeer. He provides an expensive hotel suite for her and tells her he wants her to help him muscle in on the beauty parlor racket and make millions. To his own surprise Silk finds himself falling in love with Annie. He takes her to dinner. In the restaurant Annie wins the admiration of Tom Gillespie, son of a millionaire who has made his money in the trucking business. Gillespie's companion, Alice Schuyder, a society girl, resents his interest in Annie and asks him to go.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER V.

Tall Tom Gillespie had gone through enough to entitle himself to the claim that he was a man.

He had landed in Castle Garden, an Irish immigrant kid. He had looked for the gold they had said was in the streets—all he had found was mud. He was the oldest of thirteen children and the dirt-floored hut had been just big enough for the next dozen, the parents and the cow. So he had been pushed out. He had six or eight kinsmen in New York. But they were all traveling out of the same station. He was still too young to be a policeman. So he got a job driving a wagon.

From that start, reins in hand, Tall Tom became the owner of the wagon, another one, the stable, more stables; and by the time motor trucking came in, he was a Tammany leader, a rich man, the husband of Nora Quinn, and the father of a boy. He didn't care any more for that son than he did for his both eyes. His sentiment for Tommy went double.

He still drove with reins in his hand. Tom Gillespie was born a leader—whether of Tammany or the impoverished tenant farmers of his county, or a South Sea island, if he landed there.

He had come up through the competition of New York money-making and the dirt and shenanigan and intrigue of Manhattan politics. And his word was currency and his promise was security.

Silk's Apartment

Now he had lived to see his boy, the son of the son of the son of an impoverished Irish farmer who had scrabbled for a living on a flinty four-acre patch of worthless soil, a Yale graduate, a celebrity, a wholesome and handsome youngster with brains, body and bulldog in his make-up.

* * *

When Silk Freeman's Hispano-Suiza drew up to the door of his Park avenue apartment house, wherein on the eighth floor he had his hide-away, his sanctum and his hop-nest, the uniformed doorman, who packed a gat under his ornate harness, and who looked as smart as any door opener on the street, bent toward the Big Shot and whispered:

"Biff—Glasson—in the lobby."

Freeman didn't answer him. He just guided Polack Annie toward the door and followed her in. He addressed the elevator man, who had an automatic in his armpit, too, and said out of the side of his mouth:

"Take the lady up— get her in—I'll be right along."

The elevator man guided Annie toward the lighted lift. He slid the door back at the eighth, knocked on the metal portal opposite with just such a succession of taps, and the door opened.

Annie saw a bent, aged man. He didn't see her — much. He never raised his eyes, surely not his head. He waved toward a roomy chair. Annie slumped into its hospitable embrace.

"May I serve you a drink?" asked the servant.

Annie smiled.

"Scotch—straight, old timer," she answered. "You've done a bit in stir. How's YOUR folks?"

"Yes, ma'am," he replied, and shuffled out for the liquor.

Annie's eyes roved. She saw a windowless room. The furnishings were antiques. The carpets were high and thick and furry. Everything had solidity and substantiality.

Report on Gillespie

So—this was the retreat—the home—of Silk Freeman, the Big Shot!

To this fastness he had brought her, Polack Annie!

The servant sing-songed in with the Scotch. Annie threw it down. It was good.

"Get this, Chief," Glasson was saying, downstairs. "I've piped off this Gillespie set-up. He's hooked in wit' Tamm'ny an he's no pushover. But he can be tooken. The dough he's knockin' off is a crime. If we can muscle in on that river-front stevedorin'-truckin' outfit, B. B., we're ridin' high, wide an' handsome, I'm for givin' it a twirl."

"Oh—you are? Where do you get' that 'we' stuff? Since when you got pleurisy? Who slipped you the lowdown on it in the firs' place? Sure we can cut in there. Gillespie is one o' the white-haired boys. But I never was stopped becus somethin' I went after was hard to get—women, rackets, dough, ins of a guy's life—what the hell is the fun o' goin' after what's in the bag all the time?

"I saw this Gillespie's kid t'night. He was glommin' Annie—I mean a flamin' broad I had with me . . . and he knew who I was—I know the waiter was givin' him the office. He lamped her like a college punk would. He burnt up the twist he was with—one o' the Schuyders, and they're certified checks . . . that was just an accident. I don't hold it against the kid—he's a hick—but, somehow, it was a challenge, at that. And I don't like it. Hear me? I don't like it."

"Okay, Chief—if you don't like it, I don't like it."

"I didn' ask you to like it or not like it. Follow that Gillespie gag through. He's been in business fifty years. He's cleanin' up. He works through a flock o' tough teamios and has a deal on with the dock rasalers. This is been comin' to him for a long time. I don't know what's delayed it. He got rich at it, didn't he? And we never got a quarter out of it. If we let things go on this way, there'll be no holdin' these vested business men. Everyone of 'em has an angle. Don't think diff'rent, Biff—this is a republic. There's nothin' on the level. They got combines, connections, strong-arm works an' the power o' the press, usually.

"In our game we can't advertise. I wish I could. I can make any outfit, eat it an' love it, excep' the newspapers. I don' mean they shade for you becus you buy space. But I guess the damn saps read their own sheets an' believe it. I'm big business. But you think I ever get respect? Think I ever get a dignified interview? No. See this ear? See this ear—whiter'n the other one? I got that frozen one night—standin' in a frost in front o' this here buildin', which I was buildin'—improvin' the locality, raisin' rents, just a creator of values an' up-builder o' property. I stood an' stood. I was waitin' for a reporter to come by an' ask: 'Mr. Freeman, how much does this investment represent? What inspired you to knock down four shanties an' erect a magnificent residence structure?' But none came.

His Only Interviews

"No—none . . . but if a hoodlum shoots his jane or a pineapple is flung in a barber shop, the news-hounds are draggin' me out of bed: 'What do you know about this, B. B.? —Can you tip us off on that, B. B.?'

"Tall Tom Gillespie owns trucks, huh? They have tires an' bodies an' engines an' good will an' background—an' influoence an' power—have they? Well, Silk Freeman is Tall Tom Gillespie's partner, or Tom retires an' Silk Freeman owns it all. Is that clear? Is that enough?"

"Plenty, Chief," assented Glasson.

"Okay—now I'm goin' upstairs. I got a scarlet woman—scarlet above the ears, anyway. You take care o' that Gillespie turkey. I'll go up an' talk turkey to my—my guest . . . you never were in the boss truckin' business, Biff, were you?"

"No, Chief—I never was," answered Glasson.

"Well—you are now. Scram."

"Okay, on the job. I'll ring you about—say 10?"

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Twice a year the hair should have a course of scalp treatments. Good vigorous friction, combined with the violet ray, and the faithful use of antiseptic lotions to keep the scalp healthy. If the top-wopse moults to any extent, it should be brushed vigorously. Every hair removed by the brush is dead and done for. The sooner out, the better.

Business gals mustn't be tempted with too many ruffles and fluff stuffs. The big bosses don't like femininity stressed too much when femininity has her nose to the grindstone or close to the typewriter keys. A woman worker must not only be capable and competent, but she should dress the part. After all, the smart, plain little frock is the most becoming. Meaningless bows look as if they had been flung on and happened to stick.

The business man is constantly condemned for talking nothing but business.

But the business man is no worse than anyone else in any other line, be it collecting fossils or expounding philosophy.

In society what do we hear? Nothing but the chatter of their business, which is meeting the right persons and marrying into the right set.

Theatrical people talk theater. Movie stars talk movies. Writers talk books. Artists talk art.

The business man at least works while he talks, which is more than can be said of some who are always talking ideals, but sponge on their friends.

We all talk shop—whether its a nickle-plated can-opener, or an oil-painted canvas, and most of us bore those not interested in our line!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Be Governed by Dietary Limits.

Everyone at some time has suffered the tortures of food poisoning. Poisoning by bad food is still a common occurrence in every country. At times it may involve a large community becoming almost epidemic in character. This is particularly true in larger cities. Such epidemics are commonly due to poisoning caused by germ-laden or contaminated food.

DR. COPELAND

Food spoils easily. This is due either to lack of refrigeration, or to improper cooking. Meat of diseased animals is dangerous. Such food, regardless of the preservative measure used, may be capable of causing poisoning of a very serious nature.

Milk is one of the most important of our daily articles of food. Unfortunately it is easily contaminated. The use of such milk gives rise to severe and often serious digestive upsets.

Years ago much poisoning was caused by spoiled canned food. This is a rare occurrence today as great advance has been made in the canning industry. Meat, fish or vegetables that are not absolutely sterilized when canned will generate a gas. This will cause bulging of the top of the can that can be easily detected. In addition when the can is opened a foul odor escapes.

If you find a can like this further inspection should always be made. Look at the label—it should appear clean and not soiled. The juices of the can should be clear, never cloudy. There should be no frosty-appearing covering on top of the contents.

As a rule, canned food is properly prepared and will remain so for an indefinite period. A good suggestion to remember in reference to canned food is that if you do not use all the contents at one sitting, keep the remainder in stone or enamelware containers on ice. Better still bring the materials to a boil before the next serving.

Quite often we are made sick by a food we should not eat. Experience alone is the teacher. Certain individuals are extremely sensitive to certain foods. Most individuals instinctively avoid these foods. Unfortunately, others do not, and they may suffer marked digestive disturbances closely resembling severe ptomaine poisoning.

Such foodstuff: as deviled crabs, lobsters, oysters, hot breads and certain heavy sweets taken by persons will cause digestive disturbances. The man who knows his own dietary limits is indeed a wise man, providing he is governed accordingly.

The Marry-Go-Round

Passing the Paprika

The long skirts pose as symbols of "modesty"—but most of them look more like advertising displays.

"Prosperity" has ruined a lot of people; because, as soon as a man gets a little prosperity, he goes and hands most of it to Wall street, while his wife hands the rest to the installment collectors—and starts a few new charge accounts.

A newly married pair are like two small boys—they never feel really acquainted, until after they've had their first battle.

In marriage, as in politics, it's usually the "third party" that keeps things stirred up and throws the machinery all out of order.

* * *

Men grow too old to dance, too old to work, too old to play—but never too old to brighten up and straighten their neckties, when they see a pretty woman.

It may be a sign that the romance has worn off, but it is a sign that his love has "jelled" and his heart will stay put, when a man begins to call his wife "Old Girl" or "Mama."

* * *

There are two kinds of fools: Plain fools—and the kind who will carelessly risk losing the love of the woman of his life for a smile from the woman of the moment.

* * *

A man seldom learns by experience, in love; he is only dazed by it, so that he goes around in circles and does the same foolish thing all over again.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Gift for the New Baby

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Some friends of ours have a new baby and I wish to send a gift. Both my husband and I are good friends of theirs. Would it be correct for the gift to be sent in both of our names?

2. Should it be sent to the baby or to the mother?

A. M.

1. Yes, this would be the gracious and correct thing to do.

2. To the mother.

Visiting Fiance's Parents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Kindly let me know as to whether it is proper for my daughter to accept the invitation of her fiance's parents to stay at their home for the week before her marriage, when she goes East for the wedding? Her fiance was here with his parents in June, and it is not convenient for him to make the trip again, so my daughter will go East, accompanied by her sister-in-law.

2. If she is married in a traveling suit, should she hold her gloves and bag during the ceremony?

M. R. C.

Yes. This would be proper.

2. No.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, November 12

An interesting if not exciting and pleasant day is the forecast based on the chain of fortuitous planetary configurations. It is probable that this happy state of affairs may be operative in the personal rather than the business relations, as the gracious Venus, queen of romantic, domestic, affectional and artistic matter, is in dominion, fortified by a similar disposition of Uranus, which enhances the adventurous aspect of Venus, causing sudden and extraordinary activities in this direction.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of sudden developments, with out-of-ordinary phases, probably reacting on the purely personal activities.

A child born on this day should be bold, brave, adventurous, original and skillful, and at the same time kindly, gracious, popular, and attain happiness and position.

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

Should Wifey Sit by Demurely While Hubby Plays Lothario to Other Women With Her Pay Check?

I thought I'd met Dumb Ones of every variety of Sappy Susan and Meechin' Minnie that was made—but Dawn has 'em all skinned! Listen!

She's married. She would be! She's working. The Big Boy attends to that. And every pay day she passes over her pay check—and he gives her back enough for carfare and lunch.

And then, what does our Thrifty Hero do with the wife's little wad? Why, he puts it with the $100 per week which he himself earns—and spends it on the other girls.

All of which—and plenty more—Dawn knows. But she loves him so! She can't possibly leave him! Even though he never says a civil word to her . . . except on pay day!

So won't we please be sorry for her? And make a big fuss over her broken heart? Yes, won't we! Just watch us!

"Dearest Sally Martin:

"I need your help and advice more than anything in the world. My heart is just simply breaking.

"I waited six years to marry him, because he wasn't through school. And I loved him so much, while I was waiting, that I never went out with a single other boy.

"We have been married a year now, and I am working. I don't mind that. In fact I like it. Sometimes I think my unhappiness would kill me if my job didn't take things off my mind.

"Here's the big trouble. Rex doesn't seem to love me any more. Once upon a time he couldn't wait till he got to my house to see me and take me out in his little car. But now he doesn't stay with me one hour of an evening.

"I give him my pay check every single week, and get enough money in return for carfare and lunch. He makes $100 a week, and takes mine besides, and all the clothes I have had since we were married was two dresses, bought recently. We have no expenses, as we stay with my folks, who will not take a cent from us, although they could use it.

"My love for him is so great it is eating my heart out. I can't give him up. I worship him. But every night in the week I sit by the window alone, while he is outside of his office, which is just across the street, talking to girls and women, until he feels like coming home and going to bed. He says that 'tis business to talk to these women . . . but he can't talk to his wife for 10 minutes . . . except on pay day. And then all he waits for is my check, and he is nice to me for about five minutes before he gets it.

"But everyone thinks he's wonderful, because he's always smiling and pleasant, to everyone but me. He has hit me twice and apologized for it afterwards. But in five minutes he was off again.

"I'm not bad looking. I've been told that many times. And I'm a good dancer . . . or was once. And I could have married a boy who could have bought and sold Rex, and never noticed it. But I love Rex. I love him so much that it would be a pleasure to give him one of my limbs—or both, if he needed them.

"Oh, Sally! I am so unhappy! Is there any hope for me? I've even given up the clubs I belonged to for him. And now I have no one. I've never told any of this trouble to my folks, because they think he's fine. Why won't he talk to me? I've done everything for him.

"DAWN."

Why won't he talk to you? Want to really know? Then get it straight, sister—both barrels!

Why should he talk to you?

What interest can he possibly have in a "bowl of mush" like you?

Yes, I admit he's no high-grade dish himself. And why any able-bodied female should prefer him to poison, passes me. But the fact remains, that regardless of his manners or morals, he does possess sufficient intelligence to earn $100 per week. And you think that that intelligence should be focused on you. Why?

Why should he respect you, when you haven't an atom of respect for yourself?

Why should he court you, when you've made yourself cheaper than the dumbest gal a-going?

Why should he get excited about you, when you haven't a spark of gumption, a flicker of humor, a glimmer of allurement, a gesture of challenge, to offer?

You belong to him? You're always waiting for him? Well, what of it? So's his toothbrush. And so far as I can judge, the toothbrush gets the better breaks.

Yet you call that love? All right, go right on calling, and see what it gets you! Sorry for you? Not a bit of it. Why should I be sorry for you, when you're not sorry for yourself? Why should I condemn the man, when you, the woman, are handing yourself the rottenest deal on record?

He's a bad man? Maybe. But spinelessness such as yours bore, disgust, infuriate and harden the finest man that ever lived. Why, just thinking about you for 600 words makes me want to take a sock at you! And what I'd do if I had to live with you for a year, would probably get me life.

Am I joking?

I'm not.

I'm telling you seriously, how you affect people, Dawn. And husbands react exactly like other humans. A husband isn't going to "respect" and "love" a woman, merely because she bears his name. If that woman doesn't honor herself, she'll receive no honor. If she is too lazy, too cowardly, too sloppily sentimental, to stick up for her own rights, she'll have none. All of which means you, lady.

And now, if you have any spunk at all, you'll snap out of your slump, grab your pay check and proceed to give this husband a lesson! Then, maybe he'll know you're living.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Fear Aroused in Lillian's Mind.

I was standing near enough to Lillian so that I was able to grasp her arm unobtrusively at her question concerning Charles Owen and to give it a pressure which I am afraid came very near being a pinch. But I was exceedingly anxious that she should betray nothing of her prejudice against Owen—which indeed I shared—to that wily gentleman's sister-in-law. Helena Brixton not only was a guileless soul who suspected no evil where her family affections and loyalties were concerned, but she also was a garrulous impulsive woman, or I missed my guess completely. She not only would resent any criticism of her husband's half-brother, but she would be exceedingly apt to tell him about it.

This would be a move fatal to my plan for keeping us informed concerning the movements of Charles Owen without his suspecting the espionage. Only in this way, I felt, could we determine whether he was trying to win Marion's confidence against the time when she should attain her majority and be confronted with the financial "restitution" which her mother had rejected for her.

Whether Lillian yielded to my signal, to Marion's pleading, anxious glance, or to her own judgment I was not able to determine, nor did I care to know. It was enough for me that she barely waited for Helena Brixton's puzzled rejoinder. "But I just told you, Lillian, Charles is going unless Sam sends for him," before answering heartily, "Oh, yes, yes, that will be very nice, I'm sure. Now, tell me the rest."

"The next question was, 'where?' wasn't it?" Helena laughed. "I'm going to let them have a real party. We're going over to the——" She named a smart restaurant—"have dinner, then go to that new musical comedy and then go to a very mild supper club for a snack of supper and an hour's dancing—no longer—these are preparatory girls, you know.

"That answers all the questions except 'how long' and 'what to eat,' doesn't it?" Mrs. Brighton laughed. "If I promise to have them home by half after one at the latest, and let you select the menu right now, will that satisfy you?"

"Very nearly," Lillian shot back. "I'll leave the menu to you, only stipulating that you pay all hospital bills. But what do you mean by 'home'?"

Mrs. Brixton looked a bit disconcerted. "Why, I thought you'd let Marion stay with Carolyn tonight at our apartment?" she said.

The little lines around Lillian's mouth tightened obstinately, but before she could speak Marion struck in firmly.

"Please, Mrs. Brixton, don't be angry, but I'd like to come here tonight. I haven't seen Mummy for weeks, you know."

Lillian's eyes looked as if someone had suddenly switched on a light behind them. A tremulous smile curved her lips as she looked at her young daughter.

"That's very sweet of you, darling," she said, warmly, "and you know how happy it makes me to hear you say that. But I mustn't be selfish, and we shall have many hours together this long vacation. Besides I could not have it on my conscience to let you talk if you did come home. I should tuck you straightway into bed. So I think on the whole it will be better for you to go home with Carolyn instead of putting Mrs. Brixton to the inconvenience of bringing you down here."

"Inconvenience doesn't enter into it," Mrs. Brixton said, earnestly, "but I don't care what's your reason, just so we can have Marion. I promise you I won't let them lie awake and talk when they come home. Now, something else. Will you permit Marion to ride in Central Park tomorrow morning with the others?"

A panicky little expression swept Lillian's face.

"You didn't bring your habit home, did you, Marion?" she faltered.

"Oh, yes!" Marion caroled. "All four of us are bringing them. We're all in the riding class at Whitney, and oh, Mummy!"

Her eyes were luminous, her voice tremulous. Lillian turned her eyes from her daughter to her husband.

"I wouldn't mind at all if they were riding out at the farm," she said, "but Central Park, and we don't know the horses, and——"

"I don't think you need to worry about the usual livery horses for Central Park," Harry Underwood drawled with a grin, "but if you're nervous, Lil, and the young people are willing, I'd be glad to act as an extra groom, or sais, or what have you?"

My eyes flew to Marion's face. I knew what infinite possibilities for hurting both her mother and stepfather lay in her possession. What would be her reaction to this offer?

REALISM DOMINATES NEW PRODUCTIONS REVIEWED HERE BY STAGE CRITICS

'Strictly Dishonorable' A Bubble of Mirth Light as Air

By GEORGE SEIBEL

IT'S NOT DIFFICULT to understand why "Strictly Dishonorable" has been the reigning comedy success of two years in New York, where they must have novelty and spice.

George Seibel

The novelty of Preston Sturges' play, shown to Pittsburghers at the Nixon, is in the fact that here is a speakeasy that is just about deserted, and an operatic tenor who exhibits acute virtue in a moral crisis. Those are two phenomena that New York had never observed in conjunction—and so "Strictly Dishonorable" was acclaimed as a hit.

Perhaps there are other reasons. One of them is surely the delectable mixture of humor and romance in the dialogue. In most comedies the cleverness is too obtrusive, but here it is just quietly pervasive. And there are such eloquent silences. At the beginning of the third act, when Ralph Locke as the speakeasy proprietor comes into the room where the heroine is asleep, he has about five minutes of dumb show—and no words could say as much. Things like this may be habit in an old playwright; they are inspiration in a young man like Sturges.

Comedies of this sort, like the farces of Farquhar and Congreve, must be spontaneous and bubbling. "Strictly Dishonorable" is that. One might almost label it champagne—or ginger ale—or root beer.

There are no headaches in it either.

ITS PEOPLE ARE HUMAN

Sturges has made his people human, even though their humanity is a bit strained. Besides that virtuous tenor, acted well by Lino Manzoni, there is the cad-dish cad from the Oranges in New Jersey. To be from the Oranges is almost a capital crime in Gotham, and the Broadwayfarers will believe almost anything about such a man. George Meeker makes Henry Greene appear human even though he's from New Jersey. But it's a close shave.

Isabelle, the heroine, is another of these human beings who must be taken for granted. If they grow such a blend of sophistication and innocence in the land of cotton, Little Eva would have made a great Camille. But Florelle Fairbanks, some relative of the arboreal Douglas, makes Isabelle appear human even though she's from the Mississippi. She disrobes with a dexterity that indicates she has been in some first-class finishing school.

Then there's that Judge who is almost like a benevolent uncle. He must be a real Tammany judge, because he thinks "ex officio" means "out of office hours," and because he knows one drink will give any patrolman the courage to arrest an Orangeman. But if Lee Baker did not play the part with so much unction, would we believe he belonged on the bench, rather than at the bar?

AS LIGHT AS AIR

Enough has been said to indicate that the texture of this comedy is light as air. It is like one of those Japanese paper butterflies a juggler chases around the stage with his fan. We have met that policeman, so blandly represented by Jerome Daley, in the pages of "Life" rather than on the highway of life. We have met that Italian bonifare long before the U. S. was annexed to the Sahara, in the homes of Messrs. Keith and Albee. But what of that? Here's a frivolous frappee of puritanical paprika. It's a delicious dish to set before a king or a democracy!

Brightly written, without one whiff of midnight oil, without any desperate attempt to be daring, without any prudish effort to be delicate, "Strictly Dishonorable" makes an excellent evening of entertainment. It is a bubble, but a shimmering bubble, and it floats gracefully through three acts of light banter, balanced delicately beyond good and evil, where it can't be touched by any critique of pure reason.

But after all, it must have impressed the New Yorkers by its novelty. Here's a tenor who hasn't a single photograph of himself framed in his apartment, and who exhibits a reserve that would disqualify him from ever singing "Don Giovanni"—but why inquire curiously into the machinery of a comedy that makes such excellent entertainment and is so delightfully played?

Carnegie Dramatists Present Melodrama

The St. Thomas Aquinas Dramatic Club of Carnegie will present "Drive 'Em from Home," a melodrama in three acts at the Carnegie Library Hall, Carnegie, on Wednesday evening, November 12. The club is composed of the members from the Court Carnegie, Catholic Daughters of America and members of the Archbishop Canevin Council, Knights of Columbus of Carnegie. The play will be directed by M. C. Hock.

SHARP PLAYERS DON UNIFORM AND LOOK LIKE SOLDIERS

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Tramp, tramp, tramp—the George Sharp Players have marched off to the war. They have turned the Pitt stage into Somewhere in France and are presenting "Lilac Time." It is a "Lilac Time" minus some things that featured the Jane Cowl stage production and the songs of the Colleen Moore movie. But it has incidental and between-act music by Eddie Peyton's little orchestra. And it has lilacs in every stage window. So it can't be said there isn't "atmosphere."

All of the usual Sharp players are present, except Mabel Kroman. She's the girl they left behind them, this week. A number of less familiar faces are present also.

The men players all look like soldiers in their uniforms—but not all of them succeed in acting like soldiers. And few of them have much resemblance to British soldiers, which they are supposed to be. Scattering attempts at being English—with a Cockney accent here and a "rawther," or some such, there—are made with faltering success. The result is a strange British "army."

ROMANTIC CLINCHES

However, there are some creditable performances. John Winthrop wins attention as a major. He, at least, must have seen "Journey's End." Paul McGrath makes a hero that is convincing most of the time. He and Jean May who does nice work as the little French heroine, do some neat Garbo-Gilbert clinching.

One thing is difficult to reconcile with many of these war romances. So many times the heroine berates war because it takes her soldier-boy sweetheart away from her. She should remember that it is the war that brings him to her in the firs' place.

THERE ARE THREE ACTS

The story chiefly concerns an English officer's romance with a French girl. The action is laid in a cottage in Northern France and there are three acts. The most impressive scene is where Heroine Jean May gets on her knees and prays to be able to pack up her troubles and smile. And the goofiest scene is when Hugh Banks throws a magazine at Robert Fiske. It is such a gentle toss!

Frank Anton, who used to be a Golden Rod Showboat player, is in the cast. Other performers include Charles Webster, Katherine Maison and Alice Ann Baker.

The play, if we haven't said it before, is a comedy romance. And it does have comedy!

'Street Scene' in Alvin
Remarkable Play by Large Company

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

A shabby brownstone house. People going in and out and passing by, or engaged in conversation in the street, in the doorway, in the windows. A hot summer's night. The following morning and afternoon. Less then 24 hours within which the "unities" say dramatic action should be confined. Some comedy, some philosophy and some tragedy—if it all isn't, indeed tragedy. These are "Street Scene," the Elmer Rice play in the Alvin that is as grim a slice of realism as has ever come to our stage.

Hemming in the shabby old brownstone house are barricades, reminders that street repairs are in progress and at the opening of the play there are red globed lanterns alight. When the play is over they are recalled as being significant. Danger! There is danger in the gossip of the neighbors, gossip that reaches the ears of the husband and son and daughter of one of the residents of the house. There is danger in the visits of another man she welcomes in the absence of her husband. There is danger for her daughter, whose unprotected position makes her appear as prey for men.

It comes with a rush and death stalks into the structure scant five hours after the Angel of Life has laid its hand upon the wife of a gentler husband than the one who deals tragedy and calls her a mother. And this is the epitome of "Street Scene"—the condensation of life and death, shaded with passion, folly, sympathy and the usual details of existence, into a visual entity.

It is a remarkable play and one calling for a very large company, playing parts ranging from kiddies to those who are parents of grown up families. There are so many playing active parts, with cameo sharpness of definition that even the more prominent can be sketched but briefly. Interest centers largely in the love-hungry wife and her jealous husband, excellently played by Norma Phillips and Alfred Webster. The romantic angle is developed well by Eleanor Phelps, as their daughter, and Norman Stewart. Max Montor, as an argumentative disciple of Socialism, imparts the philosophic touch and George Humbert, as a light-hearted, generous Italian musician, provides a wholesome jollity. Doro Merande scores as a gossiping woman, and Dorothy Raymond, Pittsburgh girl, does good work as a self-sacrificing school teacher.

Street Widening Urged for Safety

A request for the widening of Ronald street at the intersection of Greenfield avenue was received yesterday by Council from Leo J. Kirch, Republican chairman of the Fifteenth Ward. The intersection, used by pupils of St. Rosalia school, is extremely dangerous, Kirch wrote.

It would be advisable, he suggested, to widen Ronald from Greenfield avenue to Beechwood boulevard, and also widen Greenfield at the intersection of McCoslin street.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

Twelve years ago today thousands of Pittsburgh soldiers were in the mud and cold rain of the Argonne. With them was Charlie Doyle, now the Sun-Telegraph's baseball writer and then the Gazette Times' war correspondent. He has been good enough to write this diary of the days leading to the armistice.

* * *

Nov. 1—All Saints day, with the Yanks jumping off at daybreak after lying in small holes through a cold, damp night and beneath one of the biggest barrages of the war. The clouded sky is pierced by panoramic flashes of flame spouting from the countless guns operating the vast barrage. Zero hour is a relief to the tens of thousands of infantry boys awaiting the jump. A few hours later and many German prisoners, including officers, are led back and turned over to Uncle Sam's intelligence officers, who grill them for information. The 80th Division doughboys, including thousands of Pittsburgh lads, are rolling along in the great infantry wave with the famed Marines on the right of the Blue Ridge fighters. The "Jerries" have left their years-old trenches for better or worse and are on the run, although in spots they offer stiff resistance. The 320th Infantry encountered one of these tough spots.

Nov. 2—Our doughboys are chasing the Jerries afoot and in trucks out past Buzancy and toward historic Sedan, renowned city of the war of 1870. Ah! what's this—a lot of cabbage and other vegetables, planted by the Germans in anticipation of another winter. But after the Yanks kicked off they soon had the ball in the enemies' territory and are making first downs almost at will. Well, the raw vegetables taste better than the bully beef and iron rations, so the Yanks take out time for lunch.

Nov. 3—Sunday and I'm in Fleville where I encounter Gen. Cronkhite, popular commander of the Eightieth, who is all dolled up in a helmet and ready to push on with his division headquarters troops. The general and his aides are keeping as close to their infantry as possible. At this early date, the general had well defined rumors of a cessation of hostilities. The Jerries had made a direct hit on an important crossroad and succeeded in stalling traffic in an amazing manner. The big parade was halted for something like 10 miles and what a sight it was. Several allied planes are chasing one lone Jerry, the thrilling show being watched by an audience that stretches for many kilometers over the shell-swept countryside. And the Jerry finally gets away. Many feel like applauding him for his cleverness.

Nov. 7.—The Gazette Times correspondent finds his brother Steve o. k. with K Company, 319th.

November 8—The village church at Sommauthe with hundreds of refugees—old men and old women and little children, huddled together and waiting for the government to transport them to loved ones they had not seen for several years—members of their family who had escaped at the beginning of the war. Aged men and women taking all their earthly possessions in wheelbarrows to the vicinity of the church and singing the praises of their American liberators.

* * *

Nov. 9—Loaded down with German souvenirs I start a long hike toward Harricourt. The German rifle becomes too heavy and I toss it in the ditch. What a "break" I get at Harricourt, First Army Corps headquarters. With 40 miles to go to reach Bar Le Duc I find Damon Runyon, of Universal Service, and Tom Johnson, New York writer, who have a press Cadillac at their disposed. And so to Bar Le Duc.

* * *

Nov. 11—"Finis le Guerre!" "Finis le Guerre!" The War is Ended! French emotions let loose their wild currents of joy. Bar Le Duc is in an uproar. The bells in the Verdun Cathedral—famous church which stood up before the countless shells that smashed Verdun, although all its windows were knocked out—pealed forth joyous notes. The roads to the front are thronged with shouting soldiers. The Twenty-eighth Division—Pennsylvania National Guard—went over the top half hour before the fighting ceases. Military policeman stops car carrying four correspondents and asks for credentials. He's a South Side boy—Jimmy Broderick, athlete, who was wounded and transformed into a first-line military cop. Jimmy directs writers to front, where Jerries and Yanks are swapping souveniers. Some of the bolder Yanks went over and had one o'clock tea with the Germans.

Radio From Plane Gets Ticket for Woman Here

Make your reservations by radio!

It's exactly what Miss Rebecah F. Dunning, of New York, did en route by plane to the East over Pittsburgh.

Miss Dunning boarded the plane in the West. She was booked to Pittsburgh, but decided to continue to New York by plane. She made known her wishes to Mate F. L. Leroi, who used the ship's radio to communicate with the Bettis Field office. Radio operator Garold Sears had her ticket to New York upon her arrival.

SLEEPS IN JAIL, THEN DIES

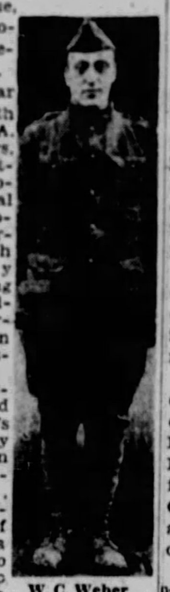
Denny Ryan, 55, of Third avenue, Pittsburgh, died in Valley Hospital, Sewickley today of pneumonia and a heart attack, hospital attaches said.

After spending the night in the Sewickley borough lockup with two jobless "buddies," just for a night's lodging, Ryan was taken ill as the three were breakfasting on the river bank.

Pat McDonough, 35, of Brown avenue, Turtle Creek, and William O'Neil, 36, of Beech street, East Pittsburgh, were his companions. When Ryan complained that he was not feeling well, they notified Chief of Police A. W. Noland, of Leetsdale, who removed Ryan to the hospital, when he died.

MILITARY RITES FOR VETERAN

On the twelfth anniversary of the ending of the war in which he battled for more than a year, Walter C. Weber, of 114 South Negley avenue, was buried today in Homewood Cemetery.



W. C. Weber

A World War veteran with service in the A. E. F. Engineers, Weber died Saturday in St. Joseph's Hospital following an operation. The burial was with full military honors—a firing squad, taps, soldiers and veterans at attention—today, Armistice Day.

Funeral services were held from Weber's home. Military rites were in charge of Trees-Carlisle Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of which he was a member. He also held membership in Duquesne Council, Independent Order of Americans.

He leaves his mother, Mrs. Emma Weber; two brothers, Pierre and Alexander P. Weber, and two sisters, Mrs. Paul G. McClelland and Miss Bertha E. Weber, all of Pittsburgh.

Miniature Coach Due Here Tomorrow for Exhibit

The miniature Napoleonic coach touring the United States in connection with the $50,000 competition of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild, will arrive in Pittsburgh tomorrow, under auspices of the Sun-Telegraph chapter of the body guild. A two-day stay and exhibition of the coach have been arranged.

From 2 to 6:30 p. m. tomorrow the coach will be stationed in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium. From 7 to 10 p. m. it will be at Schenley High School auditorium, where it will also be Thursday from 4 to 8 p. m.

Every member of the Sun-Telegraph chapter of the guild, Boy and Girl Scout and school students are extended an invitation to attend. A definite time to visit the exhibit is stressed. It will not only give one an idea of the high standards of coach building, but will show what can be accomplished by following the guild plans. Furthermore, it will guide one in the preparation of the various coach parts, for a separate display of parts is a feature. Everything is free.

Those who have questions to ask about eligibility or about the actual work of reproducing the coach model should make doubly sure of being present, for they may put their inquiries to the crafts expert in charge of the display. Parents, manual training teachers and all other interested persons are included in the Sun-Telegraph's invitation.

J. Reinel, who constructed coaches for the late Czar Nicholas, of Russia, and former Kaiser Wilhelm, of Germany, is in charge of the equipment.

Woman Shot While Standing on Porch

Mrs. C. E. Mohe, 43, of 1153 Admiral street, North Side, was wounded in the left wrist by a bullet fired from a nearby hillside as she stood on the rear porch of her home. The bullet was removed by Dr. Charles Stybr, of 865 Lockhart street. The victim could advance no motive for an attempt to shoot her.

200 PAY FINES IN AUTO DRIVE

The drive against violators of the automobile laws which, launched yesterday, resulted in the arrest of 200 motorists, was being continued today by state highway patrolmen and the city motorcycle police.

The activities today were not centralized as they were yesterday. Each police unit was working independently and in its own regular territory.

The violators arrested yesterday were haled before various aldermen and fined from $10 to $50. Every fine was paid, it was said. Most of the offenses were for the failure to obtain inspection tags. Overloading of trucks, speeding and improper passing of street cars also comprised the charges.

Capt. Philip J. Dorr, of the state highway patrol, who, with Lieut. A. J. Oldham, headed the state patrolmen, declared they are concentrating upon drivers passing street cars on the left side, which was blamed for the crash early yesterday in West Liberty avenue, which cost the lives of three youths.

WALSH LEAVES HOSPITAL

Paul Walsh, 28, of 805 Bluff street, son of Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh, and Charles Sheehan, 30, of 927 Bedford avenue, wounded early Friday when, they say, they attempted to break up a Negro fight in the Hill district, were discharged today from Mercy Hospital.

They will appear against two Negroes and a Negress, arrested in the attack, at a hearing in Central Police Station.

DOG WAS MAD, OFFICER SAYS

Patrolman Edward Graney, traffic officer at Sixth avenue and William Penn way, today branded as "ridiculous" charges humane agents that he had brutally maltreated a puppy yesterday.

"The dog mentioned is one that, frothing at the mouth, ran amuck yesterday at my corner. A man called me and asked me to shoot it. The dog was probably suffering from rabies and I stunned it with a blow from my club and carried it across the street in my arm. The right sleeve of my uniform was spotted with the froth.

"I killed the dog with one bullet. It's a much better way than allow him to bite one or half a dozen people."

Graney said he would be glad, if his superiors decided, to answer any questions the Humane Society or any others asked him.

RAZE BUILDINGS, JOB AID PLAN

Demolition of unsafe and unfit buildings as an aid to business and a measure to relieve unemployment is urged in a report of John Ihlder, executive secretary of the Pittsburgh Housing Association, made public yesterday.

Destruction of such buildings would provide favorable sites for new business houses and residences, it was said. Forty-one buildings, condemned by the department of building inspection, already have been torn down, the report said, and an equal number will be razed within a short time.

Porter's $1 Ticket Wins $25,000; Will Keep Job

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Fortune has smiled on Tom Howell, Negro. He was informed his $1 ticket on the Melbourne Cup Race, Flenington, Australia, brought him $25,000. He is a porter in the General Steamship office and former trainer of the Portland Baseball Club.

"Sure, I'm going to keep my job," he said.

RUMMEL FREED IN HOLDUP

After being arrested on suspicion of holding up Paul Pruntger, of 328 North Elizabeth street, William Rummel, 36, of 900 Middle street, was fully exonerated of any blame and discharged by Magistrate Ray Schneider in North Side Police Court.

Patrolman Michael Gigliotti was called by Pruntger after the latter was beaten and robbed, he said, at Sandusky and Isabella streets. Gigliotti fired four shots at a man he suspected of the robbery, and arrested Rummel more than a block from the scene of the attack. Pruntger was unable to identify Rummel as his assailant.

A. L. Weil Honored By Municipal League

Word was received in Pittsburgh today that Attorney A. Leo Weil had been elected a vice-president of the National Municipal League, now holding its annual convention in Cleveland.

ARTILLERYMEN MEET AGAIN

Members of the 53rd Field Artillery Division were meeting again today at Hunt Armory, Emerson and Alder streets, for the second day of their reunion. They were scheduled to march in the Armistice Day parade and end their homecoming this evening with dinner and an organization meeting in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

The active members team of the 107th Field Artillery provided a big sporting attraction for the veterans when they beat the veterans' team, 10-7, in six chukkers of polo. Lieuts. U. S. Madden, veteran, and I. W. Ward, active, captained the two teams, with Capt. Ralph Steimer refereeing.

A plaque, duplicate of one now standing in Gettysburg, commemorating the stand of the parent Hampton Battery at the Battle of Gettysburg, found by Alfred D. Lloyd in a South Side junk yard and brought back to the Armory by Col. C. T. Bundy, was exhibited there to visitors yesterday.

Emsworth Fathers, Sons to Banquet

The annual Father and Son banquet of the Emsworth Branch, Y. M. C. A. will be held tonight in the association's rooms. Former Assistant United States Attorney Ralph H. Smith will speak. Hubert P. Smith is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Wife's Story of Ejectment Wins Her Divorce

Alleging she was ejected from her home because her husband refused to believe she had been downtown, Mrs. Hazel M. Carr, of Park street, Wilkinsburg, was granted a divorce from Louis H. Carr, of Homewood, by Judge W. Heber Dithrich in Common Pleas Court.

They eloped to Wellsburg, W. Va., May 3, 1919, when she was 17, and her husband 19, she testified. January 15, 1928, when she returned home from a trip downtown, he called her a liar and struck her several times, ordering her out, and she left, according to her testimony. She said she had left him several times previously because of his abuse.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 11.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Both political sides are arguing over who will control Congress, with this cockeyed system we have, where you are elected one year and take office a year or so from then. Why, it simply comes down to, "Who will be living then?" Now in December Congress meets, but that's not the ones that were elected, that's the ones that were defeated. If you are defeated you stay in Congress, and if you are elected you stay out. The only way to get a man in Congress is to elect a young man who looks like he will live till he is seated.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

MARION DAVIES HOSTESS TO 1,500 VETS AT BANQUET

FAMOUS FILM STAR 'COLONEL' OF REGIMENT

Pacific Coast Hookup to Broadcast Los Angeles Fete; Many Heroes Guests

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.—All arrangements are completed for the most elaborate and most joyous party ever given to American veterans of the World War, at which Miss Marion Davies will be the hostess tonight at the Biltmore.

More than 1,500 veterans of the American combat divisions will be present, most of them with their wives and sweethearts. Every detail for their entertainment has been taken care of by the military committee which has assisted Miss Davies in preparations.

BROADCAST PARTY

Coast-wide broadcast of half an hour of the highlights of the Armistice night party has been arranged in response to an interest in this event that has spread to the entire Pacific Coast. It will include a brief address by Gov.-Elect James Rolph, Jr., greetings from Col. Marion Davies and probably her words in presenting to the First Division Society, A. E. F., new colors and standard, a bit of the entertainment features by celebrated stars, and something of the gay sounds of the dance and the merrymaking of the veterans.

Evidences of the rapid spreading of interest in her Armistice night party to the limits of the Pacific Coast and on to the Middle West and the East have justified the faith of Miss Davies that such would be the case. Miss Davies, from the moment she decided to become hostess to so great a body of veterans, expressed the hope it would influence others to spend money now to help to start a movement towards return of prosperity.

Stations of the Don Lee system in addition to KHJ that will carry the broadcast of the party are: KFRC, San Francisco; KMJ, Fresno; KOIN, Portland; KOL, Seattle; KVI, Tacoma, and KFRY, Spokane.

DANCE STARTS PARTY

The party will begin at 8 o'clock, with dancing in the Sala De Oro, the Biltmore's most spacious hall. Music for the dances will be furnished by the celebrated Patrick and Marsh orchestra augmented for this occasion by draft upon the best musicians obtainable. Performers who have volunteered their services include Albertina Rasch, Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Cliff Edwards and Benny Rubin.

ACTRESS REAL COLONEL

Governor-Elect James Rolph, Jr., will be in the program during the half-hour of the broadcast. He is an honorary member of the Ninety-First Division Association.

Miss Davies is Colonel Marion Davies of the First Division, A. E. F., having regularly been made an honorary colonel of that famous organization.

Possibly no phase of the party will be as unusual as that of the massing, as guests of honor, of so many Congressional Medal of Honor men and Distinguished Service Cross men.

In addition to the Patrick and Marsh Orchestra, the 63rd Coast Artillery Anti-Aircraft Band of Fort MacArthur will be present to play stirring martial airs. Maj. K. B. Lemmon and a number of his officers from the fort will attend the party, and from the battleships in Los Angeles harbor about 50 officers will be present, to join in paying honor to the World War veterans.

Seventy-four men who are in the United States Hospital at San Fernando will be brought in for the party in automobiles especially provided for them so that they may be guests.

Eighty-three veterans of those now in the hospital at the soldiers' home in Sawtelle, likewise will be provided with motor transportation to the party.

'Colonel Davies March' To be Played First Time

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.—(Universal)—A stirring, martial music of a brand-new military composition—the "Col. Davies March"—will be heard for the first time in public tonight at the party which Miss Marion Davies is giving for the veterans of the American Combat Division of the World War at the Biltmore.

With its composer, Bandmaster Morris Chernoff, directing, this lively rythm will be played as one of the events of the happy evening.

Covenant Mission Holds Donation Day

The annual donation day of the New Covenant Mission will be held today at the mission's building, Pride, Reed and Crawford streets. Reports of the mission staff will be read in the afternoon. In the evening the Rev. William C. Shane, of East McKeesport, will speak. The Rev. Dr. E. Marshall McFadden, general superintendent, will preside.

JAIL ALLEGED BAIL JUMPER

Returned from Franklin, Pa., where he was arrested for jumping bond of $1,500 posted by the late City Controller Daniel Winters, Charles C. Rodgers, of Ashlyn street, was being held in the county jail today, according to detectives.

Rodgers, held on a conspiracy charge in 1928, was freed when Winters furnished the bail piece. He failed to appear when his name was called in court, it was said. The death of Winters left his son, Bert, sole heir and executor of his father's estate. Threats of declaring the bond forfeited prompted a new search for Rodgers.

Several days ago Lieut. of Detectives Thomas Malone, lifelong friend of the late controller, learned of the alleged bail jumper's whereabouts in Franklin. Police of that city picked him up and yesterday Bert Winters and a friend, Zigmont J. Gorskey, of 50 South Nineteenth street, returned Rodgers to Pittsburgh.

N. Side Church Holds Bible Conference

A Bible conference under direction of the Rev. Dr. E. J. Pace, Bible teacher and cartoonist, of Orlando, Fla., is being held this week in the Brighton Road and McClure Avenue Presbyterian churches. Sessions are held at 2 p. m. in the former church and at 7:45 p. m. in the latter. Dr. Pace is discussing "Ephesians" in the afternoons and "Romans" at night. The conference will close Sunday.

High School to Give 3 One-Act Plays

Three one-act plays will be presented by the senior class of Westinghouse High School in the high school auditorium the night of November 21 under the direction of Miss Olive Schillinger. The plays are "Poor Aubrey," "Caleb Stone's Death Watch" and the "Knave of Hearts."

Camera Question Box

Today's question: After thinking about the World War for 12 years, would you be willing to go again?

LIEUT.-COL. CLINTON T. BUNDY, 371st Field Artillery—Although I was born and raised a Quaker, which society does not approve of warfare, I believe in protecting our homes and country if necessary by war. I served in the Spanish-American War, Porto Rico campaign, Mexican border, in National Guard and in the World War and I am ready to go again my country's call.

Lieut.-Col. Bundy

MISS CORA A. BRIDGE, Mercy Hospital, nurse—Yes, I was in service during the World War and would be willing to give the same service again if I would be needed. However, I hope that we will not have another war to cause such a necessity.

Miss Bridge

Mr. Nye

R. NYE, ex-service man, Marine Hospital—I don't care anything about war. I was over for about a year. It was all new to me then. I would rather not experience it again.

Mr. Walker.

HERMAN WALKER, ex-service man, St. Marys—I served over seas about 15 months. If I were needed, I would be willing to go through it again.

JOSEPH BARBAR, ex-service man, Marine Hospital—I am still disabled from the last war, but if I were able and I were needed, surely I would go.

Mr. Barbar

J. EULER, ex-service man, Marine Hospital—I was "over there" 16 months and was gassed, but if there was another war and my services were needed, I would be glad to go.

Mr. Euler

JOB FOR COUNTY MEN ASKED

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong will ask approval tomorrow by the Board of County Commissioners for a plan to put several hundred men at work on the county airport. In a statement yesterday Armstrong announced that instead of letting contracts for the surfacing of roadways and building of hangars and other necessary buildings at the municipal airport the county's own organization can do the work as well as any contractor and put idle men to work.

The airport project will necessitate the expenditure of approximately $425,000 for labor, $367,000 for material and $250,000 for a hangar and auxiliary building. The plans provide for placing 100 men and 12 road rollers at once.

County employes will donate one day's pay to the Welfare Fund, Armstrong announced.

The county since September has kept the maintenance force of the Department of Public Works at work with special appropriations totaling $600,000. They will be kept working indefinitely with the approval of the airport project.

P. R. R. INSTALLS CAB SIGNALS

Completion of automatic cab signals installation on the Pennsylvania Railroad's main line tracks between Altoona and Pittsburgh November 16 will place in service more than 2,800 miles of track equipped for locomotive cab signal operation, Vice President E. W. Smith has announced.

It is estimated the company will spend approximately $2,000,000 for the new signals between Altoona and Pittsburgh. The total cost of installation over the entire system is placed at $25,000,000.

By the new signal system there is reproduced in the cab of the locomotive a set of signals which duplicates the automatic wayside block signals.

SCHOOL BOARD RE-ELECTS OFFICERS

Tax to Be 11.75 Mills, Same As Last Year; Y. M. C. A. Exonerated of $64,602

The Board of Public Education, at its annual meeting yesterday, unanimously re-elected its officers, headed by Marcus Aaron, president.

The Downtown Y. M. C. A., Wood street, was exonerated of school taxes for the past six years, totaling $64,602.94.

A resolution was put into the record congratulating and thanking city Council for condemning Hays street, East End, and directing that the board's department of building and supplies begin plans to develop Peabody High School's $250,000 athletic field project on the site.

The budget was passed, setting the millage at 11.75, the same as last year's.

Of the officers elected, N. R. Criss was renamed vice president, H. W. Cramblet, secretary, at the same salary of $6,000; J. Rodgers McCreery, solicitor, at the same salary of $7,500, and Roy D. Schooley, city treasurer, as ex-officio board treasurer.

ORDERS WIRING FINISHED

A resolution directed against the Iron City Engineering Company was submitted by Solicitor McCreery. It gave the company three days' notice to complete the wiring of the heating system in the Clifford B. Connelley Industrial School, or default its contract.

In an interchange of correspondence, which McCreery read, it developed that union electrical workers refused to connect non-union wired heaters. According to the contract, the engineering company agreed to do the work, but due to the refusal of the union, has been unable to have the project completed.

Delay would cause inconvenience to pupils and possibly the dismissal of classes, McCreery said. He added that less than $100 worth of work remains to be done, and should it be completed according to union regulations, the cost would mount to more than $1,100. He declared:

"If the board should agree to such a thing, its members could be tried for malfeasance in office."

In the event of the default of the company, the work will be done and charged to the engineering company, President Aaron said. Philip Murray, labor leader, questioned Attorney McCreery but did not vote against the resolution.

FIGHT TO SAVE HAYS STREET

Court action to prevent the vacating of Hays street to provide a larger athletic field for Peabody High School will be taken by residents of the district, according to Charles A. Fagan, attorney for some of the interested parties.

This decision was announced by Fagan after Council yesterday, by an eight to one vote, approved the vacating ordinance. Vacation of Hays street, between Highland avenue and Beatty street, was urged by the Board of Public Education.

The latter body has purchased property on the north side of Hays street, according to councilmen speaking at yesterday's meeting, the purchase being made under an agreement that the street would be vacated.

Councilman Charles Anderson voted the only negative yesterday.

The court case will be based on the contention that the property damages will far exceed the benefits.

Leonard J. Skidmore, 18, of 239 Meridan street, late yesterday was indicted by the grand jury on a charge of accessory after the fact in connection with the killing of Charles Hammond, attendant at a service station on Mt. Washington, September 20.

George Skidmore, elder brother of Leonard, is a fugitive from justice, charged with the murder of Hammond. George is also wanted for shooting two state officers while being trailed in the mountains of Central Pennsylvania.

The charge against Leonard Skidmore grows out of the alleged aid he gave George in escaping after fleeing from Pittsburgh. Leonard, who was a student at Bellefonte Academy, is alleged to have carried food to his brother in a mountain hideout while scores of officers were hunting him.

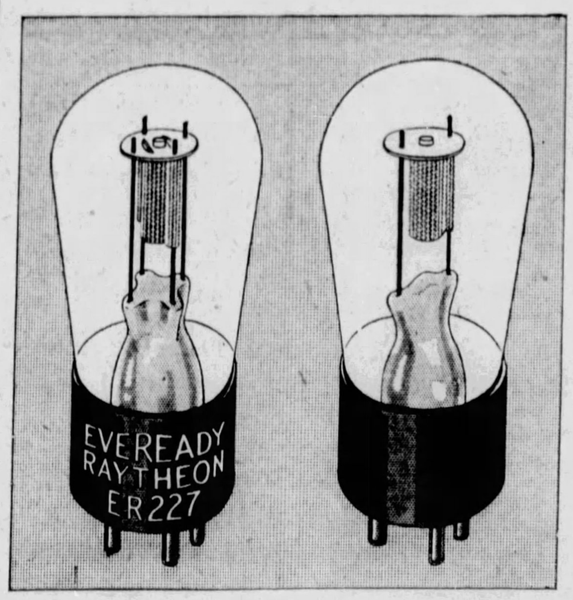
GREAT DISCOVERY

New 4-pillar Radio-Tube

Wonderful New 4-pillar Eveready Raytheon Tube Taking Radio Fans by Storm. Hundreds of Families Enjoying Remarkable Results. Read Some of Their Tributes.



A NEW IDEA in tubes . . . 4-pillar Eveready Raytheon Tubes are the first and only real improvement in modern tube design. They give new, thrilling performance . . . make new radios out of old!

In 4-pillar tubes, a fundamental engineering principle is applied to tubes for the first time. 4-pillar construction . . . a simple, sound principle of supporting the fragile, vital tube elements at four points instead of the usual two, as in old-fashioned tubes.

Notice the four strong pillars. With this solid foundation, the many fragile parts in the tube can be assembled with watch-making accuracy — and they can never "wiggle, wobble, jiggle, slip, or slide!" When buying one tube, or an entire set, look for—insist on—4-pillar Eveready Raytheon Tubes.

In old-fashioned tubes, the many delicate parts have only a two-legged foundation — like the goal-posts on a football field. Two supports instead of four! Jolts, bumps, vibration from dynamic speakers — all can impair their vital accuracy. That means uncertain results . . . old-fashioned reception!

Four rigid posts, one at each corner of a square! . . . Twice as strong . . . twice as durable . . . able to resist the jolts all tubes receive during shipment, secure against vibration from dynamic-speakers. And built with watch-making accuracy which is safeguarded by the rugged 4-pillar construction! Don't buy any tubes until you hear Eveready Raytheons.

Free Home-Demonstration

See these tubes, try them . . . test them in your own set, FREE. No test with electrical apparatus in a dealer's store can tell you how tubes will sound, nor how long they will last. You must hear these marvelous tubes, in your own home, under the exact conditions your own set must meet every night. Words can't tell you, so National Carbon Company has arranged through its dealers to demonstrate 4-pillar tubes to you free. There's no obligation, no annoyance. Just a simple, clear test of tube quality. It costs you nothing.

If your present tubes are many months old you can't afford to miss this opportunity. Merely to replace one or two defective tubes is not sufficient. No radio-set is any better than its poorest tube. There's an Eveready dealer near you. Telephone for the free home-demonstration of a complete set of Eveready Raytheon 4-pillar Tubes now.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Women, Smartly Gowned, See Plays at Alvin and Nixon

Theatergoers had a difficult time last night trying to decide which first night to attend, "Strictly Dishonorable" at the Nixon, or "Street Scene" at the Alvin. Anyway, there were ever and ever so many folks, gayly gowned, at both houses.

During the first intermission at the Nixon, many of the younger society set met in the foyer to laugh again at lines in the play.

Mrs. George A. Kelly, III, I saw, wearing a long black velvet wrap with a collar of chinchilla. Chatting with her was Mrs. Reginald O. Quaile, wearing silver-green satin and a wrap of green and silver with a collar of white fox. Mrs. J. Shirley Austin in black chiffon with a coat of Russian black carracul was in the group too.

Mrs. Tom Hilliard, wearing a graceful wood-brown lace gown with a cape and a tiered skirt, I saw with Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland, who wore hunter's green lace, and both had mink coats.

Lace Is Popular

In the crowded foyer I had a glimpse of Mrs. J. Henry O'Neill, wearing a blue and silver brocaded dinner gown with silver fox banding the brief sleeves. Anne Douglas Stewart chose a gold lame coat and a black chiffon gown.

I believe I had a glimpse of Mrs. B. R. Shriver, and I saw Mrs. Jack Bissell wearing an interesting grey satin dress.

"Street Scene" at the Alvin this week attracted many last night. I saw Mrs. Douglas Stewart there, wearing black lace with a wrap of silver lame, and with her was Mrs. W. R. Kelly. Mrs. Harold Hershman I noticed smoking in the foyer, wearing a stunning gown of magnolia satin, encrusted at the hemline with jet, with which she wore an eton jacket of satin embroidered with jet. Her wrap was of caracul.

Notable Patrons

Harriet Fickes was there, in beige lace with a lame wrap, and I caught a glimpse of Clodagh McCune.

Mrs. Carl A. Miller was chatting in the foyer, wearing black crepe and ecru lace with a coat of ermine. Mrs. T. W. Friend was among the audience, too, and I saw Margaret Geddes wearing a princess model of black georgette, talking with Kathryn Meyers who wore black crepe with a yoke of jade green wool lace. Mrs. Mabel Geddes was with them, wearing black velvet with smart touches of ecru lace.

First Canadian Woman House Member Makes Plea for Peace

The world hasn't got forever to work for peace; if some of the barriers to peace are not soon removed there will be a falling back on the old reliance of arms and the world will again be immersed in conflict. So said Agnes MacPhail, first woman member of the Canadian House of Commons, when she addressed the community mass meeting held last night in the Y. M. and W. H. A. under auspices of the Pittsburgh Conference of Jewish Women's Organizations.

It was a splendid, powerful talk Miss MacPhail gave—nothing new or startling in its content, but impressive by reason of its sincerity and simplicity and the personality and experience of the speaker, behind whose utterances there is always felt a delightfully satirical but kindly humor.

People are living internationally in an economic sense, but not in a mental sense; everybody except stupid politicians knows that the world is an economic whole, Miss MacPhail said, as she went on to show how interdependent it is. Decent progress has been made legally and psychologically towards world peace; peace is becoming a way of living, she said, but little more progress will be made until some international agreement is made for lowering certain tariffs.

As for disarmament, all that has been done, the speaker declared, is the scrapping of a few old ships that nobody wanted, anyway. Incidentally Miss MacPhail prophesied that history will be kind to Woodrow Wilson, for he was a man with a vision. In his time America held the spiritual leadership of the world in the hollow of her hand, but she threw it to the winds, the speaker remarked.

Miss MacPhail was introduced by Mrs. Joseph Schutzman, a member of the national board of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, who also introduced R. Templeton Smith, speaker in behalf of the Welfare Fund. There were two appropriate soprano solos beautifully sung by Suzanne Seiger, with Julia Katz at the piano. The Rev. Benjamin Lichter opened the meeting with prayer, and Miss Hannah Olbum, president of the Conference, welcomed the large assemblage.

FUR COLLARS STAND HIGH IN FASHIONABLE FAVOR

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Fur collars are standing high in the favor of fashionables here at present. These collars that are build up to stand high about the head are somehow reminiscent of Queen Elizabeth's ruff—and are quite as flattering. And for the smart heads that are hugging affectionately to draped toques, turbans or berets this type of collar is a happy thought. The little hat buries itself comfortably in the warm fur and the style alliance of the two modes is complete. Many women have discovered that these high standing fur collars have a tendency to make them appear several inches taller which is a distinct advantage to those who are not of Junoesque proportions. This impression is emphasized by the accented waistline, molded hip effect and slightly flaring skirts that are characteristic features of this season's coats.

THE COLLARS are developed of both the long fluffy furs and the short snipped skins that are at present trying for favor. But today we have chosen one of the handsomest models in Vionnet's collection which is lavishly trimmed in mink. It is of a rich, beige duvetyn with the extremely wide sleeves distinguishing it as especially appropriate for afternoon wear. The sleeves have a circular ripple below the elbow with four heavy bands of the fur. The body of the coat is slightly fitted at the waistline and flares markedly below; it is somewhat longer in back. The standing collar of mink frames the face in the becoming manner previously described, and continues down the two sides of the front forming borders.

AND AS AN EXCUSE to remark the growing popularity of grey as a color of importance, we are showing Cheruit's jaunty little frock of soft wool jersey. It is in light grey with the trimmings of black jersey. The scarf collar in black crosses at the front, one end being drawn through a slit in the other and buttoned down onto the bodice. The belt is of matching grey suede.

repeat a most important statement regarding

FUR COATS

"You can buy a Grabowsky Fur Coat now at a price that is approximately 30 percent less than a year ago."

A Hudson Seal* Coat, for example, that was $300.00 last year is only $195.00 now. Yet, this year's coat is decidedly longer, and has a fuller sweep. The same proportionate saving is true of every other fur coat in stock. Grabowsky prices, right now, are lower than they've been in fifteen years.

In the opinion of this establishment, backed by more than a Half-Century experience, the time to buy Fur Coats was never so opportune, as now.

Dog Keeps Vigil, For Missing Master

KENORA, Ont., Nov. 11—(AP.)—Though human searchers have abandoned hope, a small dog kept vigil today where his master's coat was washed ashore on the edge of Big Stone Bay on Lake Kenora.

Joseph Chapleau, the dog's master, and three others set out by boat on a hunting trip 8 days ago. Coats and blankets washed ashore were the only trace.

Searchers sought to take the starving dog back to Kenora, but he refused to leave the spot.

CUTS SILK HOSE BILLS IN TWO

A New York fashion expert has just made a wonderful discovery. Realizing the expense of constantly buying silk hose and lingerie, she learned that with perspiration comes an oily excretion from the sebaceous glands that causes silks to rot.

Soap and water she found were inadequate. Only a solvent like Energine cuts this film of oil. So when next washing silk hose or dainty undergarments, add a tablespoonful of Energine to a quart of lukewarm, soapy water. Wash thoroughly, rinse well. Note the new, fresh cleanliness—see how the original color is revived so easily and with less rubbing. After using this new method, you'll be amazed at the difference in results from washing in just soap and water.

And when you see how many more weeks' wear you get from silk hose, you'll be more than delighted with a real economy. Energine is unexcelled also for quickly removing all dirt and grease spots from dresses, hats, shoes, gloves, ties. Large can 25c.

Quinn and Schang Pass. Bucknell's Star Backs. Drab Start by Savoldi. Three Plays Cost Year. Left-Handed Catching. Fine Line Aids Violet.

OLDEST BATTERY IN MAJORS GOES OUT

THE UNCONDITIONAL RELEASE of Pitcher Jack Quinn and Catcher Wally Schang by the Philadelphia American League club marks the passing of the oldest battery in the major baseball loops. Quinn was 45 on July 5 last, according to the record books, and is said by some baseball men to be actually a year or two beyond that mark. He was the oldest performer in the big show, and, counting the two seasons he worked in the Federal League, he saw 20 years (the last 13 of them consecutive) of major service, his record for that period being 224 victories and 194 defeats. He began his career in organized ball with the Connellsville club in the old Pennsylvania State League, for which he pitched in 1903, 1904 and 1905. In the majors he hurled for New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia in the American League, Boston in the National, and Baltimore in the Federal.

Jack Quinn

Schang was 40 last August 22 and played in the big show 18 consecutive years, having come up in 1913. For a time he took turns at third base and in the outfield and filled other utility roles in addition to his catching duties. Besides his two engagements with the A's, he played for the Red Sox, Yankees and Browns. He took part in six world series for three different clubs and was eligible for that of 1930. A brother, Bobby, caught for the Pirates in 1913 and 1914.

QUINN'S FADE-OUT REDUCES the number of spitball pitchers in the major leagues to three. They are Burleigh Grimes, of the Cardinals, Clarence Mitchell, of the Giants, and Urban Faber, of the White Sox. With Quinn gone, Faber also ranks now as the oldest active pastimer in the main tent. The White Sox flinger was 42 on September 7. If Cy Williams, of the Phillies, is made manager of the Allentown Club, a reported possibility, three of the oldest four players in the majors will have departed since the close of the 1930 season.

Williams, who will be 42 on December 21, rates next to Schang at present for the distinction of being the majors' oldest player. After Cy come Pitchers Eppa Rixey and Clarence Mitchell, 39. Outfielder Sam Rice and Pitcher Sam Jones are 38, and Rabbit Maranville, oldest of all the infielders, celebrates his thirty-eigth birthday anniversary today. Outfielder Charley Jamieson and Pitchers Burleigh Grimes, Jess Haines and Dazzy Vance are 37.

IN THE GAME against W. & J. at the Stadium here next Saturday, the only college number of the week in Pittsburgh, Bucknell will present one of the leading backfield stars of the East in the person of Fullback Clark Hinkle.

This is Hinkle's second year as a varsity regular. Last season he was high scorer in the East with 128 points. He is a triple-threat back, as he passes, runs and punts with equal facility. Hinkle also plays baseball and basketball. He went to Bucknell from Toronto (O.) High School, where he was captain of the football team in his final year.

Clark Hinkle

ANOTHER BUCKNELL BACKFIELD star is Justin Jay Brumbaugh, a fine passer and broken-field runner. He plays a halfback position regularly, though in his sophomore year he was the varsity quarterback. Brumbaugh passes with either hand. It was his 25-yard pass to Andrew Lobel, followed by the latter's 15-yard run, which gave Bucknell a touchdown that tied Temple, 7 to 7, two years ago. This will be the tenth meeting of Bucknell and Wash-Jeff in football, and the former has yet to win a game from the Presidents. The closest approach to a victory was recorded in 1928, when the Red and Black was held to a scoreless tie.

JUST THREE MINUTES of action and three plays back in 1928 cost Joe Savoldi, Notre Dame's great fullback, a full year of varsity competition and makes the present season on the Irish squad his last whether his marriage affects his status as a student or not. Otherwise he would be eligible for one more season if he remained in school for post-graduate work.

Until this fall, Savoldi was only a so-so football player, as measured by Notre Dame standards. Now, of course, he is going great guns, is easily the outstanding fullback of the year, and is regarded as one of the greatest in the history of Notre Dame which includes George Gipp, Paul Castner, Pete Vaughn, Elmer Layden and other immortals.

IN THE GAME between Georgia Tech and Notre Dame in 1928, Jess Carver relates when the Yellow Jackets were putting the crusher on the Irish, beating them for the first time, 13 to 0. Coach Rockne shot Savoldi into action in the first half as a replacement.

Bingo! Georgia Tech popped a pass in the direction of Mr. Savoldi, and Mr. Savoldi promptly forgot all he knew about forward pass defense and failed to cover. Result—a fine gain for the Georgians and a squirm by Mr. Rockne.

Joe Savoldi

WHAM! ANOTHER PASS whistled toward Savoldi, and again Jumping Joe balled up the play. More squirms on the part of Mr. Rockne. Then Tech tried a shot at one of the tackles, the ball carrier broke through, and Savoldi, coming in either too fast or too slowly, missed the tackle, with the result that the runner got clear and the way was paved for a touchdown. That was enough. Out came Mr. Savoldi, never to go in again that year, but destined to work his way to the position he now holds, a position which Mr. Rockne, no doubt, would like very much to have him fill next year.

HAVING COME UP from the playing ranks themselves, John McGraw and Connie Mack are among the present-day baseball leaders who never forget needy old players when an opportunity arises to give them a helping hand. Dan Brouthers, one-time first baseman and great hitter, has been employed at the Polo Grounds for many years by McGraw, and Amos Rusie, former pitching speed king, also had a job there for a long period.

Now Joe Vila learns that when some extra ticket takers were needed at Shibe Park in the late world series, Mack hunted up four old players for the posts. They were George Washington Bradley, 75, Cub Stricker, 71, Jack Clements, 65, and Al Maul, 64. In 1876 Bradley pitched the second no-hit game in baseball history.

American Ice Loop Cut to Seven Clubs

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—The American Hockey League will be a seven-team circuit instead of an eight club affair, it was announced here last night, with the New York membership being moved to Minneapolis.

Difficulties in getting a financial backer and inability of the New York entry to find a suitable rink brought about a change in the make-up of the American League, William F. Grant, of Kansas City, president and secretary, said.

President Grant said the New York team will be shifted to Minneapolis intact, with P. L. Smithers, president of the Booth Fisheries and United States-Dominion Transportation Company, the financial backer; Harlan Rohm, secretary, and Nip Dwan, formerly of the New York Americans, of the National League, coach and manager.

CATHOLIC TEAMS STAGE ANNUAL GRID FRAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

The Armistice Day sports program for Greater Pittsburgh and the neighboring counties is both distinctive and diversified. Seasonal football naturally holds the brightest focus in the holiday entertainment, but there is food for lovers of boxing, auto racing, polo and billiards, with a dash of golf for those who do not fear the elements as they traverse the links.

Raymond Burke

One of the most interesting events of today is the football contest at Greensburg between the well-coached teams of St. Vincent and St. Francis. The Westmoreland County classic will bring together two natural rivals whose play reaches a fascinating climax on the occasion of the Armistice commemoration.

The battle of this afternoon will be the seventh meeting of the schools on the grid. To date the honors are strictly on the side of the Loretto squad, which has copped five of the six fights. And the outlook for the Latrobe gridders in today's scrap is not very bright, judging from the comparative results obtained by each club so far this season. The odds, it would seem, favor St. Francis.

BIG CROWD EXPECTED

Greensburg is all set for this clash of the two popular institutions, a large crowd being anticipated. The battle of last year was staged at Latrobe, it attracting a big turnout of fans. The two teams have left no stone unturned to be in top condition for the important game. A number of Pittsburgh district players are on the St. Vincent squad, among them, Raymond Burke, the center, who hails from this city.

The following high school football games are scheduled today: Central Catholic at Etna, Donora at Monessen, Ford City at Kittanning, Franklin at Meadville, Knox at New Bethlehem, Kiski Reserves at Indiana, Dubois at Punxsutawney, Emporium at Reynoldsville and Brownsville at South Brownsville.

Another interesting grid game is the one carded for Johnstown between Kiski and the Pitt freshmen. These two young squads will fight it out in a contest staged in behalf of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The Pitt yearlings of the present vintage are a very clever combination and Jim Marks and his Kiski stalwarts are expecting the toughest kind of a fight.

A novel grid battle will be fought in Rochester to add to the day's gayety. Elevens composed of former Pitt and Geneva stars will clash at the Rochester Athletic Field as one of the high lights of the Armistice celebration sponsored by Walter S. Roth Post of the American Legion.

MANY STARS IN GAME

Jimmy Rooney and Ollie Harris, two brilliant performers of recent years in the two institutions mentioned, will lead their respective clubs into action. The two lineups will be dotted with names of boys who helped to edify the college sport in this district.

Other professional contests are scheduled at Arnold, Sewickley and Monessen. Tarentum Firemen and Arnold Independents will tangle in Arnold, the Rox Rangers and Sewickley Yellow Jackets will do combat at Sewickley, and Monessen will stage a night contest

Chocolate to Box For Title Dec. 12

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Bat Battalino of Hartford, Conn., will defend his world's featherweight championship against Kid Chocolate, Cuban flash, in a 15-round bout in Madison Square Garden, December 12. The bout will top the card for the New York American's annual Christmas Fund show.

Battalino has held the 126 pound title since September, 1929, when he outpointed the champion, Andre Routis. Chocolate long has been rated as an outstanding challenger for the crown but suffered a surprising defeat at the hands of Fidel La Barba in his last start.

The Garden announced that La Barba has been signed to meet Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., body puncher at the Garden, November 28.

PLAN CHECKER CLUB

Plans are under way to organize a checker club in the Greater Pittsburgh district. Carl Pinski, 704 Lyceum Building, is behind the movement. Players desiring to join the new organization are asked to get in touch with the sponsor between 11 and 2 o'clock daily.

BULLDOGS BOOKING

The Pike Bulldogs would like to book a game for Saturday or Sunday with any leading junior lightweight team. For games call Grant 9630 and ask for the manager.

RIVAL PANTHER, OHIO LEADERS BIG STARS

By JESS CARVER.

Two strapping young men, one a bit more strapping than the other, but both tough and rugged enough to chase you and you and you and you clear out of the ball park, will tie up Saturday in a duel that will be well worth traveling from here to Columbus, O., where the duel is to be staged, to see.

Wesley Fesler

The one, Eddie Baker, captain of Pitt's football team, and the other, Wesley Fesler, leader of Ohio State's gridiron forces, have been the bright lights in the somewhat drab doings of their respective elevens to date.

The seasons aren't so drab right now, what with Pitt having tied Nebraska and beating Tech and O. S. U. kicking the tar out of Navy (there was a good one) and holding powerful Wisconsin even.

BOTH BIG SHOTS

Anyway, Baker and Fesler are the big shots of their teams and will bang away at each other at Columbus Saturday. Baker does the kicking, most of the passing and all the directing of the Pitt team. Fesler kicks passes and runs the ball for State and plays at his old position, end, on the defense.

Up until last week or rather, the week before, when State tied Wisconsin, the Panthers were regarded as certain shots to take the Buckeyes. Now, the situation is vastly different, with Ohio conceded almost an even chance of taking Pitt, even though the Bucks are to face a November Pitt team and one that has had its morale boosted to no little degree by the win over Carnegie.

DRILL TODAY

Today may be Armistice Day to most of the peoples, and a holiday to boot, but its just another practice day for the Panthers. The boys were served a long drill in the morning and then given the afternoon off. There was no rough work on the program today, and there won't be any during the balance of the week, either, for

INJURED DUKE STARS RETURN

Hard practice for an annual football classic begins on the Duquesne University campus this afternoon as Elmer Layden's Durable Dukes get into shape for their tilt with Geneva College at Beaver Falls on Saturday afternoon. During athletic relations between the schools extending over a period of 28 years the Red and Blue have never defeated the Covenanters on their home field.

Last year at Forbes field when the Dukes staged the first night football game in Pittsburgh and the first night college game in the State of Pennsylvania the Night Riders trounced Geneva 27 to 7 in the twenty-seventh year of their relationship, just giving the locals one point in their score for every year. The big task on the hands of the Dukes this year is to repeat their performance at Beaver Falls, something that has heretofore never been accomplished by Duquesne University's gridders.

One enlivening influence for the Dukes lies in the return of Sammy Pratt, star pass catching end, and Jim O'Donnell, stellar tackle, to uniform and light practice. Both men worked out yesterday afternoon and it is likely they both will be able to get into the Geneva game.

Kass Kovalcheck, line-plunging fullback who would be of great value against Geneva College, will not be able to get into the game. There is little chance that Kass will be able to make the grade toward a return to uniform although the rapid recuperation of Pratt and O'Donnell was unlooked for as they, too, were said to be out for the season at the time their injuries occurred.

Johnny Knapic will have a bit of difficulty in getting away for any of his spectacular long runs for touchdowns and extensive gains from scrimmage by the way things appeared on the Bluff yesterday afternoon. The first dummy session against the frosh was held and in building their offensive against the yearlings, who were making use of the Geneva offensive, the Dukes aimed to bottle up Knapic tightly. Howard Harpster's boys will have to open their bag of tricks for the Dukes if they expect to take the game despite the weight of tradition which makes them the favorites on their home grounds.

Price Refuses To Quit Job Under Fire

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 11.—Replying to criticism directed at him because of the team's poor showing this year, Clarence (Nibs) Price, University of California football coach, declared he had no intention of resigning under fire.

"I should say I'm not going to quit," he said.

Price declined to comment on an editorial in the Californian, campus daily, attacking him and his coaching staff.

"I have nothing to say about it and I'm not going to answer it," he remarked. "I'm sitting tight."

ARMY, NAVY DEAL FADES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Whether the country's two service institutions will resume competition on the football field remains a problem for which no formula has been evolved that would bring an affirmative answer.

After a conference at the War Department yesterday, Secretaries Hurley and Adams joined in a statement saying no basis had been found for an agreement to end the dispute over eligibility rules for players which has stood in the way of footballgames between West Point and Annapolis.

Last week, on the basis of a compromise proposal by the Navy, which had been accepted by the Army, although not entirely favored by it, it had been thought a settlement was in sight. A last minute withdrawal of the latest offer caused the collapse of the negotiations.

TWO LOCAL CUE ACES IN LEAD

Charles Ellis and Billy Greenwood, local stars, and Frank Scoville and Earl Dahl, of Buffalo, enjoyed leads of varying lengths as the Eastern eliminations in the national three-cushion billiard championships were resumed at the Ellis Recreation Parlors, Diamond street, this afternoon.

Ellis gained a 50-46 edge over Dale Campbell, another Pittsburgher, in the first block of their 100-point match yesterday afternoon, and Scoville stepped out in front of Harry Oswald, Pittsburgh, 50-33, in the second afternoon encounter.

Dahl opened the evening dueling by gaining a 50-41 lead over James Beecher, Buffalo, and Greenwood concluded the day's jousting by running away from Pete Daly, Buffalo, 50-23.

The evening players of yesterday are the afternoon performers of today. The winners in the 100-point matches will engage in a round-robin tourney tomorrow and Thursday.

OTHER RESULTS

At Boston—Edward Snodgrass, Boston, gained a 50-40 lead on Morgan Hughes, New York; Philip Hirschberg, Newark, N. J., gained a 50-39 lead over Harry Schuler, Brooklyn; Charles Ryder, North Dartmouth, Mass., gained a 50-34 lead over Charles Seaback, New York.

At Portland, Ore.—Charley Sibley, Seattle, gained a 50-41 lead over Corliss Fairbanks, Portland; John Fitzpatrick, Seattle, gained a 50-37 lead over Edward Cummings, Portland.

Smith, Edwards Box Second Draw

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 11.—Tiger Tiny Smith, of Sheffield, England, 115 pounds, and Johnny Edwards, of Huntingdon, W. Va., 115 pounds, fought another 10-round draw in the main bout at the Coliseum here last night in a thrilling battle. It was their second meeting and terminated the same way as the initial clash, with neither able to get an edge.

St. Vincent Grid Team, Alumni To Banquet

Win, lose or draw on the football field today, in their battle at Greensburg with St. Francis, the boys and men of St. Vincent's will make merry tonight 'round the festive board at a big banquet to be held at the college in Beatty, Pa.

John J. Maloney, prominent Pittsburgh motion picture magnate, who is president of the St. Vincent Alumni Association and chairman of the athletic committee, reports a big program. Athletes who "did their bit" for the institution as far back as the '80s will take part in the homecoming affair.

MUCICO WINS SCHOOL RACE

Sam Mucico, wearing the colors of Langley High School, won the second annual High School cross-country race over the Schenley Park course yesterday afternoon, winning a thrilling race from Carter, of Schenley High School, by a yard. White, of South Hills, was third; Sharpless of Peabody, fourth; Smith, of Schenley, fifth, and Goldman, of Peabody, sixth.

For the second year in succession Schenley copped the team prize. It was a five boy event, Carter finished second, Smith fifth, Captain Rose, ninth, Slocum tenth, and Deak eleventh. This was a wonderful placing considering that 70 boys representing Pittsburgh High Schools, started in the race.

Mucico beat Carter in a hectic finish. The boys came out of the bushes heading Flagstaff Hill neck and neck, and the Langley boy won by a yard after a hard sprint in the last 200 yards.

ERODIAN WINS RACE

PIRRONE LACES LAWLESS, BUT IS 'LOSER'

OFFICIALS KICK ANOTHER ONE AT GARDEN

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

What's the use?

Bucky Lawless, of Auburn, N. Y., made his second appearance in Pittsburgh last night, in the Motor Square Garden ring, lost his second fight and grabbed off his second funny decision when the judges disagreed and the referee sided with the judge who happened to be wrong.

Several weeks ago, they handed the bicycling Lawless one on a silver platter over Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, who outboxed him in seven of the 10 rounds. Last night, Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, was the "goat." He belted out a clean-cut margin in every round but the eighth, which went to Lawless, and the ninth, which was even, but at the finish saw the split decision go to his opponent.

Judge Frank Brown and Referee Red Robinson were the officials who found for Lawless, while Judge Frank Ferris was correct to voting for Pirrone.

BOUT IS ONE-SIDED

There was nothing to the fight except Pirrone until the eighth round and then Lawless' rally was short-lived, for Pirrone, after a two-round letdown, came back to punch Bucky full of holes in the final session.

Pirrone, as steady a two-fisted punching machine as ever stepped into a local ring, started off with the clang of the opening gong to stalk after Bucky and jolt him with stiff lefts to the body and head and hammer rib-wrecking rights to the body in close. He also crossed a straight right over Lawless' lefts delivered on the run.

In the second round he followed through so hard on a right to the jaw that he fell into the ropes, but Lawless was so badly dazed he couldn't take advantage of Paul's position. Paul came off and belted Lawless until he had him sagging and holding on. Finally a right to the jaw dropped Bucky for a count of two and he held on and was in distress for the remainder of the round. In the third, the blood began to seep from Lawless' nose and mouth, and, in the fourth, he went down again in close-range fighting, but was up without a count, only to run into further punishment. In the fifth, sixth and seventh, Pirrone continued the modified murder, cutting Lawless' eye in the last of these frames.

LAWLESS RALLIES LATE

Pirrone was keeping up the assault in the eighth until Bucky rallied in sheer desperation and drove him off, incidentally, hanging a "mouse" under Pirrone's right eye. Pirrone slowed down and Lawless, continued attacking while on the move to win his first round of the fight after having taken a savage lacing.

In the ninth, Lawless outboxed Pirrone, but the latter's heavier artillery evened the honors. The highlight of the round came when Lawless pushed Pirrone back off balance into Bucky's corner.

Pirrone easily carried off the last round with his solid hitting, forcing Lawless to hold on several times under the impact of his thudding gloves.

It was a fine fight to watch for action and it is too bad Lawless' showmanship and prancing about blinded the officials to the great punching work of Pirrone, one of the most dangerous hitters in the welterweight class. But, then, in view of the failure of the boxing commission to take any corrective action in the face of the epidemic of poor decisions here lately, maybe it's asking too much to have these bouts judged on their merits.

GIZZY BEATS McARTHUR

Battling Gizzy, of Donora, punched and roughed his way to victory by a wide margin in every round over Benny McArthur, of McKeesport, and formerly of Saginaw, Mich., in the eight-round semi-final. He came close to knocking out Benny in the opening round, when he had him down for counts of seven and five. McArthur started to get up on the first count and then went down again in a neutral corner and could have been disqualified under the rules.

McArthur also was down momentarily in the sixth, after Gizzy had fallen down and bumped his chin on the floor.

It was a wild, hilarious slugging bee so far as Gizzy was concerned and just a bad night for McArthur, who couldn't fathom this unorthodox buzzaw that they turned loose against him. Gizzy had him cut and bleeding on the left cheek and eye over most of the route. The bout was to be a stepping stone for Gizzy toward a windup against a well-known opponent in the Garden ring early next month and he survived the test in hollow style.

HOLT STOPS O'HARA

Billy Holt, Negro puncher, of Homewood, dropped George O'Hara, of the North Side, for counts of eight, eight and seven in the first round and then O'Hara went down for seven from Holt's first measured right to the chin in the second and Referee Robinson halted the bout as Georgie regained his feet in a groggy condition.

Sol Lippo, of the Hill, played stab and grab with Bobby Barnes, Negro, of Homewood, in the first six-rounder and lost a split decision when Referee Al Grayber voted for Barnes, along with Judge Brown, while Judge Ferris scored the bout for Lippo, who really had a slight edge, as bad as the bout was.

Lawless weighed 147 pounds and Pirrone 148½; Gizzy 134½ and McArthur 135; Holt 141½ and O'Hara 130, and Barnes 135½ and Lippo 134½.

MONTEITH AT RINGSIDE

Tommy Grant and Norman Borland were the timers and Harry Klaas did the announcing. It was announced that Tony Herrera and Joe Glick have been rematched for the main bout next Monday night. Ray Newton and Eddie Brannon will box the eight-round semi-final.

Jimmy Dunn was in Pirrone's corner as his chief second. Scotty Montieth, former manager of Johnny Dundee and matchmaker of the old Madison Square Garden in New York, and now matchmaker for the Olympia Arena in Detroit, was a ringside spectator, coming here to see the main bout with the idea of matching the winner against Billy Townsend, of California, at his club for Friday night of next week. Jock Sutherland, Pitt football coach, also was a ringsider.

Between Rounds

Homer Robertson, former local Negro middleweight, who has not boxed here for a couple of years, is anxious to return. In his most recent start, last week, he defeated Roy Mitchell, claimant of the Canadian light-heavyweight championship, at Halifax.

Byron Foutts, of East Liverpool, O., is another promoter who finds it impossible to run professional shows profitably this season and he has turned to the amateur sport and will stage a Tri-state golden gloves tournament over a period of three weeks beginning Tuesday, November 25. The tournament will take in four counties, Hancock, in West Virginia; Beaver, in Pennsylvania, and Columbiana and Jefferson, in Ohio.

Amateur boxing shows are scheduled for tonight at Turner Hall, Homestead, the Homewood A. C., and at Brownsville. The Homestead show will consist of 10 bouts and will be augmented by vaudeville entertainment, the proceeds going to the aid of the needy families of the district.

Freddie Edwards boxes Tony LaRose and Frankie Porto meets Mickey Dugan in eight-round bouts at Athens, O., tonight. Young Stribling takes on Arthur DeKuh at Atlanta, Sunny Jim Williams boxes Georgie Nichols at Franklin, Pa., Danny Regan tangles with Dan Martin at Portsmouth, N. H., Koli Kola engages Lew Feldman and Davy Abad mingles with Joe Barbara at the St. Nicholas arena, New York. George LaRocca boxes Ernst Guhring and Pal Silvers takes on Frank Boja at the Broadway Arena, Brooklyn, while Bill Freeman and Arthur Huttick clash for 12 rounds at an armory club in New York. Young Ketchel and Sergt. Sammy Baker box at Chester, Pa.

NAVY CHECKS ATTACK

Twenty-four games are scheduled, and, despite the loss of Charley Hyatt, Paul Zehfuss and Lester Cohen, Coach Carlson hopes to win most of them. He has 11 players on his squad. Eddie Baker, now busy captaining the Panther football team, is co-captain of the passers with Arture, and will join the floor squad as soon as his football activities are over.

PIRRONE DROPS LAWLESS

PAUL PIRRONE
High spot of main bout at Motor Square Garden last night, showing Lawless down for a count of two in the second round. Pirrone's hard hitting gave him a wide margin in the fight, but the judges disagreed at the finish and the referee's vote laughingly made Lawless the official "winner." Lawless similarly received a gift decision over Buck McTiernan here recently.

BUCS RELEASE SOUTHERN

Outfielder Dennis Southern, who was obtained from the Phillies last season at the same time that Outfielder Fred Brickell was sold to the Quakers at the waiver price, was released outright to the Baltimore Club, of the International League, Pirate officials announced today.

Outfielder Dennis E. Southern, of the Pirates, who was used principally in utility roles since he was purchased over the waiver route from the Phillies in midsummer, today was sold outright to the Baltimore Club of the International League.

The announcement of the local officials concerning Southern will come as a surprise to fans who saw in Southern a promising member of the club. Exceptionally fast and considered a ball hawk by many followers of the game, Southern's departure to the minors may seem a bit odd in view of the feeling that other teams in the majors regarded him favorably. It follows that these clubs had to waive on the player before he could be sent to the minors. Brooklyn was one club which was said to be favorably impressed by the speedy one. However, the procedure was entirely regular; the other clubs passed up the chance to get the player.

Denny and Fred Brickell changed uniforms in the middle of the last race. The exchange was quite unique. Manager Burt Shotton was "sweet" on Fred Brickell, who essayed to fill Lloyd Waner's role when the wee one went down with illness.

YELLOW JACKET HOCKEY HISTORY REPEATED

MOORE, DEFENSE STAR, ANOTHER CONACHER

By CARL W. SHATTO

The most famous and accomplished rugby player in Canada today is likely to skate for a Pittsburgh hockey team tomorrow.

A few years ago, when his remarkable feats at halfback won him recognition as the greatest ruby player in the Dominion, Lionel (Big Train) Conacher was brought here to play defense for the Yellow Jackets, Pittsburgh's representatives in the major amateur circuit of the day.

A few years later (1927, to be exact) Canadian rugby produced another mighty man of the Conacher type. Like Lionel, the new sports idol of the Canucks carried a strong fighting heart in a big robust body; like Lionel, the newcomer thrilled with his feats of skill and daring at halfback, and like Lionel—

THE NEWCOMER SIGNED TO PLAY HOCKEY IN PITTSBURGH.

VERSATILE ATHLETE

The best rugby player to grace Canadian fields since the days of the Big Train is Mansell (Red) Moore, candidate for a left defense berth on the Yellow Jacket ice squad that is to open the International League season at Duquesne Garden at 8:30 Thursday night. Red, who tips the beam at 190 pounds and whose ice specialty is violent body checking, was at halfback for the Balmy Beach team when it won the rugby championship of Canada in 1927, and in 1928 and 1929 the Montreal team for which he performed was runner-up for the Dominion title.

Although five feet, 11 inches tall, Moore is so rugged that he appears to be short of stature, and although a veteran in sports, he is only 21 years of age. Starting here, Conacher achieved the heights in hockey, and Moore's ice prospects are far from gloomy.

COMPETITION KEEN

Big Red faces plenty of opposition here. Steve Yanoski, Jerry Green, Cliff McBride and Arthur Berlett also are candidates for defense jobs, and all are accomplished backfielders.

Although they failed to settle the starting lineup fights, two hard sessions yesterday and a third this morning did much to improve the smoothness of the Jackets' play and better their physical condition. President Schooley and Coach Reid are eager to have their charges in top form by Thursday, for the London Panthers, the opening-game foemen, are big boys of the bruising type. Toots Holway, blond giant once with the Pirates, and Leo Reise, former New York American, both are six-footers who weigh around 200 pounds. They play defense for London, and the Panther forwards, too, are plenty big.

Ice Slivers

The fight for the right wing job is one of exceptional interest as the Jackets go through their daily drills. Gregg LaRoche, McIntyre and Smith, the candidates for this berth, are a classy quartet.

Goalie Bud Fisher and the forwards exchange verbal "raspberries" freely as the wings and centers shower him with shots in the drills. Bud gives the forwards a "Hoboken cheer" every time he deflects a shot, and the forwards return it with interest every time they succeed in getting the puck into the net.

Several of the Jackets today asked when Pittsburgh newspapers would start printing stories on exhibition games played in Canada. And they were serious too! Well, that's the way these boys take their hockey.

Three of the local skaters sport mustaches. Bud Fisher, Buck Moore and Red Moore are the boys with the upper lip decorations.

Laborers armed with brush, cloth, mop and hammer give the Garden a going over while the puckmen clean up on each other on the ice. Although their workouts aren't as spirited as are those of the skaters, they expect to be finished in time for the opener Thursday night.

K. C. GETS BAYNE

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Billy Bayne, left-handed pitcher from the Southern League, last night was claimed to join the Kansas City Blues next spring. Bayne is the third of three players obtained from Washington in a trade for Joe Kuhel, first baseman.

Long's Sport Comment

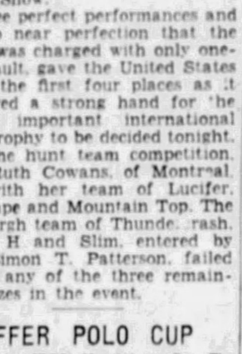
Jiggs Donahue were the others—says the theory that a southpaw backstop is under a handicap is all nonsense.

He declares he used to dare the fastest baserunners in the game to go down to second by dropping the ball out of his glove, but few of them would take a chance. And there were some fast men and real base stealers in those days, too, he recalls, such as Billy Hamilton, Billy Sunday, George Gore, Ned Hanlon and Johnny Ward.



Jack McDonald

"I REMEMBER A GAME in which I caught for Philadelphia against Chicago when Gore was on third base and Sunday on first," Clements says. "Cap Anson told Sunday not to steal second, but he did on the first pitched ball. I figured that Sunday would do just what he did. But I took no chances throwing to second, and instead I held the ball and got Gore coming into the plate. Sunday saw what had happened, and never stopped at second, but kept going right on to third. I threw the ball there and nailed Billy so easily that Anson fined him $100."

YOU DON'T SEE much mention of Jack McDonald in accounts of New York U.'s football games. Offensively he is dimmed by the great Bob McNamara and the La Mark brothers, of Coraopolis. Yet he plays just as important a part in the Violet's battles. On defense he is a bear. He demonstrated it against Carnegie here, against Georgia last Saturday, even though the latter event was lost, and he has done the same in all of New York's other games. Tartan players say he is as good defensively as Bob McNamara is on the offense, and by that they mean plenty.

Luby DiMeolo, former Pitt captain, is receiving well deserved praise in New York for the swell job he has done in coaching the Violet line. As was shown in the game here, particularly by the great work of Ross Grant, a substitute, Concannon and Schneider, he has h' men clicking just right, individually and as a group, and that's one explanation of the Violet's success this year in winning all except the Fordham and Georgia contests. Games are won in the line, and no matter what speed they rack up set of backs can go far if the forward wall sieves. Incidentally belated information of a tribute paid to one of Chick Meehan's line players for the part he played in defeating Carnegie has just come from New York. Because he recovered a fumble that led to their first touchdown and blocked a kick that led to the second, the Violet players presented to Ross Grant the football that went with the victory.

ARMY HORSES LAND SWEEP

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—In one of the most brilliant jumping exhibitions ever seen on any tanbark, the United States Army last night scored a clean-cut victory over teams from five other nations in the $1,000 international military stake at the National Horse Show.

Three perfect performances and one so near perfection that the horse was charged with only one-half fault, gave the United States Army the first four places as it displayed a strong hand for the more important international team trophy to be decided tonight.

In the hunt team competition, Miss Ruth Cowans, of Montreal, won with her team of Lucifer, Red Tape and Mountain Top. The Pittsburgh team of Thunder, Trash, Prince H and Slim, entered by Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, failed to win any of the three remaining prizes in the event.

MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,

Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 56

Only one important series was left for us on the schedule. Early in September we were required to play three games with the Yanks. The Yanks still were full of fight and felt if they could sprawl us in those three games they might ruin our morale and still have a chance to win in a desperate finish.

Connie Mack

Miller Huggins' men had beaten us in more than one vital series in recent years and they felt they could do it again, so they went after us hammer and tongs. They found, however, they were meeting a different Athletics team, a new power in baseball. The Athletics won all three games and to all intents and purposes ended any doubt as to where the pennant was to go.

That series ended with us holding a lead of 14 games. We actually clinched the pennant on September 14, at Shibe Park, when George Earnshaw shut out Urban Faber and the White Sox, 5 to 0, giving me my seventh American League pennant.

At the end of the season we were 16 games to the good. We had overpowered all rivals and won with ridiculous ease.

When it became assured in September that we would win the pennant, my thoughts naturally turned to the approaching world series. By this time the Cubs were safely ahead in the National League and it was a foregone conclusion that Joe McCarthy and I would shake hands before world series photographers.

It was up to me to get all the information possible about the batting styles, mannerisms and peculiarities of the Cub hitters as well as the extent of the skill of Cub pitchers.

Every good ball player rests his success on perhaps a half-dozen or so things that he does a little better than anybody else and it is important that his rivals should know just where he excels so that they will be better prepared to checkmate him.

Baseball players are slaves to their own technique and in an important series will try only the things they can do best. It is not so difficult to get a line on a player's individual style if you study him.

I never had seen the Cub team as a whole. The Cubs train in California, while we train in Florida, and there never was any chance for us to play exhibition games in the spring.

Two or three members in McCarthy's cast I had seen in action, but I knew nothing about the team except what I had read.

It was not difficult for me to obtain some reliable information about the Cubs from players who had played against them, while of course, I had several of my own trusted scouts watching them in the last half of September and turning over what they saw to me.

That is nothing new in baseball. Every pennant winer scouts his rivals before a world series.

While my scouts were watching every move made by the Cubs, sharp witted and keen eyed agents of the Cubs were following the Athletics and setting down on paper the strong points of every one of my players for the enlightenment of Joe McCarthy and his men.

Besides my scouts, I had Howard Ehmke omit our final trip West that month so he could sit behind the home plate and watch the Cubs in their final series in Philadelphia.

My principal concern was with my own pitchers. I reasoned if I could manipulate my flingers correctly my regular players could take care of themselves.

I never doubted for a minute the ability of these regulars to walk safely through world series fire, but I knew many serious problems confronted me in the niceties of pitching selection.

I did not want to know the fields to which Cub hitters usually hit, but I had that information by this time.

So my scouts were instructed to watch the Cub pitchers closely, and I found that they in a way resembled my own flingers in the peculiarities of delivery.

As to my own pitchers, I had a big problem to solve. Through the pennant season, the Cubs had scored great success against left-handed pitchers. It was a rare thing when a southpaw stopped them.

That gave me something to ponder over, for two of my most dependable peak men were Grove and Walberg, sidewinders.

BAKER, FESLER TO DUEL

The boys will drill again tomorrow and Thursday and hold a morning session Friday. They'll depart Friday afternoon at two bells for Columbus, riding one of Mr. Aloysius Becker's Pennsy trains, which is bound to get 'em to the Ohio capital in time to get in a good night of rest.

Bucknell and Wash-Jeff are preparing diligently for their transplanted game in the Stadium here Saturday. With the Dukes out of town and Carnegie idle, and Pitt, of course, in Columbus, the Presidents and Bisons figured it would be a swell time to put on a little ball game of their own here.

The clash Saturday will be the tenth in history between Bucknell and W. & J. If Bucknell wins which it figures to do, it will be the first time Bisons arms have won over the Red and Black. They did gain a tie a couple years ago, but never have they finished on the long end.

Bucknell figures to throw a barrage of crack ball toters against the Presidents. Tony Slate, the captain; Clark Hinkle, as good a back as there is in the East and Justine Brumbaugh are the big guns of the Bucknell attack. If the line is as good as it was when Hank Hangartner was coaching it, this trio is bound to sock the W. & J. defenses and sock 'em plenty.

WILSON GOOD KICKER

The smart thing for W. & J. to do is to have Stewie Wilson kick Bucknell to death, if possible Wilson, a left-footed booter, is a pip at that department of the game. A lot will depend Saturday on Stew's booting, for it will behoove W. & J. to keep the Bisons in their own territory, and deep traps on the deep please, Mr. Printers in that territory.

The chief offensive threat of the Red and Black is the elusive Mr. Maury Rush, a very capable halfback. Maury reported late for pre-season practice and has been ill most of the year. Hence, his play has not been up to snuff. But he's reported fit as a fiddle or at least a oboe, now, and Coach Bill Amos is busy conniving him up to tear 'em apart Sat'day.

Feeling Against Street — Latest Financial News

EMOTIONALISM REFLECTED IN MARKETS

Phase of Feeling Entails Nationwide Resentment Against Wall Street

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Current security and commodity markets reflect emotionalism in finance.

A phase of this feeling entails intense nation-wide resentment against Wall street institutions. Much of this popular feeling is blind and unreasoning, and results from a psychological attempt to find an external object to blame, rather than to admit personal errors of judgment and temperament. Accordingly, patent medicine political "reforms" which cater to these emotions should be discouraged.

Mr. Rukeyser

And yet, after this has been said, the onlooker may ask whether the Wall Street community, which manufactures and distributes securities, has any right to be smug and self-satisfied, as the economic storm rages. Houses of issue, as this column pointed out at the time, contributed to an unsound situation last year before the panic by clamoring to turn out more new issues than the investing and speculative public could digest. Corporations, on their own, added to the confusion by an extreme over-issue of new shares on rights.

BROKERS MISTAKEN

Respectable brokers and customers' men, without much regard to intrinsic values, lured in outside trading and investors at or near the top. They used high pressure methods in circulars, and in oral appeals to induce the public to buy when stocks were dear. In many instances they were sincerely mistaken. The current issue is not whether they gave bad advice. The question is whether the great brokerage houses of Wall Street are primarily engaged in the business of clearing the orders of suckers. If not, why are they so lackadaisical, so indifferent in analyzing values and pointing out buying opportunities nowadays, when in terms of assets and long term average earning power, equity securities are demonstrably more attractive. Irrespective of whether bottom is at hand or nearby, innumerable stocks are certainly—to say the least—relatively cheaper than they were during the great ballyhoo before the panic.

If the answer is made that the public is less disposed to buy now than 13 months ago, the statement is superficially correct. But if investment dealers have no other standard than the gullibility of the public, they have not advanced far toward building a lasting reputation and enduring good will. If they are to remain silent in the face of obstacles, they might be deemed disposed to cater only to a sucker public. In spite of buying apathy and the lack of investable funds in many quarters, progressive, able and competent brokers have a growing opportunity to make new friends among the discerning public by directing attention to sound investment opportunities existing at the present time. Those who start building on the wrecks of deflation can build soundly through the coming years.

AWAKENING NEEDED

What is criticized here is not last year's mistakes, but the prevailing tendency to fold up tents and abandon the markets.

To attempt to support security prices artificially would be a blunder, but to seek to organize conservative, long term investment demand for attractively priced securities, whether they be municipal bonds, short term notes, or common or preferred stocks, would be ordinary merchandising prudence. Opportunities for new fortunes are being laid in the ashes of this bear cycle, and meantime the merchants of Wall Street are for the most part fast asleep.

In former bear periods, when the public was less in the market, buying by rich capitalists and groups, when bottom was in sight, was enough to turn the tides.

This time the markets are of such immensely greater magnitude that no lasting turn can be achieved without the faith and co-operation of a large group of smaller investors.

Apropos of whether brokers cater mainly to the sucker public, Thomas F. Woodlock, writer for the Wall Street Journal, says:

"The inference is that brokers are usually 'carrying' fewer shares of stock at the 'bottom' of the market than they are at the 'top,' and this experience will be readily confirmed by the experience of all who are engaged in that business. It is indeed so commonplace an experience as to take axiomatic rank.

STOCK HOLDING DROP

"Evidently therefore stocks tend to drift out of brokers' offices as prices fall. From which it is apparent that if we suppose the market to rise from a given point and return to the original starting point, whatever 'losses' are made by the margin-speculator class as a result of its operations during both movements must of necessity be represented in the form of 'gains' by that class which holds the s"

"As a general proposition, it may be stated that individuals who go to their banks to get funds for security purchases tend to be more conservative and of greater financial responsibility than the average run of margin customers at brokerage offices. The mere granting of a bank loan implies that the borrower is well known to his bank, has a recognized credit rating and a sizeable bank deposit; whereas a brokerage margin account signifies nothing more than that the individual has some cash or securities. . . ."

Mr. Badger concludes that the class which borrows at the bank is more likely to be more astute in its market judgments than those that deal at brokerage offices on margin. He suggests that the collateral loans on shares to others than brokers may be a new and valuable index of market prospects.

Pension Plan Adopted By Armstrong Cork

By GEORGE B. SNYDER

A STEP TOWARD solving the problem of old age among industrial workers will be taken by the Armstrong Cork Company with the inauguration on January 1 of a co-operative retirement program by means of which the company and its 6,000 employes will join forces to provide for retirement, sick and accident benefits, permanent disability and life insurance.

The plan carries group insurance a step further than most other industrial corporations have gone in helping to protect employes and their families.

The entire cost of the retirement benefits or pensions will be borne by the Armstrong Cork Company. The cost of the other benefits and future pension accumulations will be shared by the employer and employes.

Retirement at 65

ALL PRESENT EMPLOYES actively at work on December 31, 1930, will be eligible to enroll, while it will be compulsory for new employes to join after six month's service. The plan becomes effective at midnight December 31, 1930, provided at least 75 per cent of all eligible employes have accepted the plan.

The amount of the pension to be paid will be determined by an employe's earning and length of service and will become payable at the age of 65. The amount will be equivalent to 1 per cent of the 1930 salary multiplied by the number of years of past service with the Armstrong Cork Company, plus approximately 1½ per cent of future earnings. While the normal retirement age has been fixed at 65, it will be possible for an employee, by agreement with the employer, to retire at an earlier or later date, with pensions adjusted accordingly. All benefits are being underwritten and guaranteed by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Pension for Widow

AN INTERESTING FEATURE of the plan is the option it gives an employe of providing a pension for his widow. By electing to receive a somewhat reduced pension himself, he can have its payment continued to her after his death.

Based approximately on annual salary, the life insurance ranges up to a maximum of $10,000 and the sick and accident benefits up to a maximum of $40 a week. Included in the general plan is a visiting nurse service which is offered, without charge, to Armstrong Cork employes living in any of the 4,500 communities, where this service is maintained by the insurance company. This feature is supplemented by the periodical distribution of pamphlets on health conservation and disease prevention.

Rewarding Service

THE RETIREMENT PROGRAM was unanimously approved by the company's board of directors as providing industry's own solution of the problem of the superannuated worker. In announcing its adoption, John J. Evans, president of the company declared that Armstrong Cork, from its foundation, had taken every reasonable step to safeguard the lives and health and promote the general welfare of its employes. He said:

"The future should give every man and woman cause for concern. Old age and lessened earning capacity naturally go hand-in-hand, so that definite provision must be made for both. Earnest application and loyal service should be recognized and rewarded."

WALL STREET HEARS

That the short interest in the stock market has been increasing, although the so-called "Big Bears" have been quiescent for several weeks.

That Warren Pipe and Foundry will about earn its dividend this year.

That there has been considerable liquidation of leading securities having an active market, for the protection of loans against issues not readily marketable under present conditions.

Forbes

One Armistice Arranged, But Room for More

By B. C. FORBES

AMERICA HAS arranged one welcome armistice, that between Democrats and Republicans, but there is room for other armistices. We badly need:

B. C. Forbes

An armistice on voluntary selling of stocks.

An armistice on "probes."

A steel armistice.

A tariff armistice.

An armistice on economic reasoning as fantastically false as was the reasoning prior to the collapse of the boom.

An armistice on "selling America short."

THE POLITICAL armistice, if faithfully carried out, cannot fail to have far-reaching beneficial consequences. Not a few of the disturbing developments of the current year have been incited by alarm over possible political upheavals. Finance and business clearly foresaw the strong drift toward the opposition, the usual and natural accompaniment of hard times. Finance and business feared that the outcome of the November elections would create apprehension all through the world of affairs.

What has happened?

IN FACE of the very stern realities confronting them, the Democrats have exhibited statesmanship by pledging wholehearted co-operation with the administration in seeking to formulate ways and means to meet the unemployment emergencies, to stay the general downtrend, and to turn the nation on a forward and upward course.

This promised burying of the political hatchet is as encouraging as it is unique. It should soon begin to bear fruit.

AMERICA HAS developed banking institutions of unprecedented size.

The verdict of the public, rightly or wrongly, is "No."

Our political leaders having done something wholly out of the ordinary to meet these wholly out of the ordinary conditions, will our financial leaders prove equally resourceful? What are they prepared to do out of the ordinary?

They did something out of the ordinary last year: They, as well as high-grade stock exchange brokers, took steps to increase all margin requirements. Such steps were entirely in order.

How about taking extraordinary action now regarding margins? Even the best of stocks having been hammered to the lowest levels in recent years, notwithstanding the national building-up process that has been going on. Would it not be conducive to the restoration of confidence and stability were responsible bankers and brokers to announce that, having raised margin requirements above the usual last year, they are prepared to lower them below the usual existing abnormally low quotations?

Many, many stocks have already lost half their price. Obviously, they could not possibly lose as much again.

OUR FOREMOST financial leaders should do more than they are doing to convince the public that they are exercising every power within their means to hasten the return of better conditions. Far more is expected from those who have climbed to positions of leadership than from those receiving only moderate rewards.

What advantages does

MELLON INVESTMENT SERVICE

offer the Investor?

In the first place, a client of the Mellon National Bank Bond Department is not regarded as a "customer" . . . to be sold a bond and then forgotten. The Bank's interest in the investor does not end with the sale. On the contrary, an accurate record of that bond is kept on file. The investor is notified of redemption prior to maturity, of approaching termination, of conversion privileges or any other facts that might escape the investor's attention. The Bank maintains a helpful interest as long as the investor owns the bond. In the second place, no bond is ever offered for sale or recommended for purchase by the investor that does not meet the requirements for investment of the Bank's own funds. No bond is ever purchased by the Bank or recommended without thorough investigation of every factor bearing on the safety of the bond. Thus, a client of Mellon Investment Service is given the advantage of the same careful judgment that the Mellon National Bank exercises in the choice of its own investments.

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENTS ERRATIC

Confused Cross Currents Keep Shares Bobbing; Lull Follows Activity

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Strong support for several of the so-called pivotal industrials was conspicuous in confusing cross currents in today's stock market.

Several prominent issues, largely in the food, amusement and specialty classes, again tumbled to new lows, but selling pressure was less severe. After considerable activity in the morning a decided lull ensued.

U. S. Steel sold up 2 points at one time, then reacted, but was well bought a point or so above yesterday's final price. American Can, General Electric, General Motors, Radio, and Wastinghouse held steady to firm. The selling had the appearance of special liquidation, uninfluenced by corporate or business developments. American Telephone dropped 5 points, then recovered 2. Baltimore & Ohio, National Biscuit, Fox & Lambert last 3 to 4. General Foods, Procter & Gamble, Corn Products, Pan American B, Warner Bros., and New Haven lost 2 or more. Case surged up 5 points and North American advanced 2 during the early afternoon. A flurry of short covering in the morning sent several issues up 2 to 4, but that advance was soon lost.

REBOUND SEEN

Several commission houses continued to feel that an important technical rebound could not be long deferred after the steady two-months' decline. The source of continued selling was still regarded as puzzling. The weekly condition statement of reporting Federal Reserve member banks showed a gain of $24,000,000 in loans against securities. Although this report was for the week ending November 5, it again failed to bear out the theory held for several weeks in some quarters that selling represented heavy liquidation of impaired collateral loans. Of the total reduction of $187,000,000 in member bank loans on securities in the past month, $155,000,000 was in New York and Boston alone, and apparently represented reduction in loans to brokers rather than to individual borrowers.

The day's new included the Federal Reserve Board's October report on department store sales, which showed considerable improvement over the September report, with a decline of only 8 per cent from the like month a year ago. Sales in September were off 11 per cent. The gain was described, however, as a little smaller than seasonal. The September foreign trade figures also made their appearance, and were less favorable. Trade with Europe showed the most marked decline of the present recession.

DIVIDENDS VOTED

Dividend actions in the past 24 hours were more cheering. Jewel Tea paid an extra of $1. Chicago Great Western paid the first dividend on its preferred in 11 years. American Power and Light directors ordered a 10 per cent stock distribution. The recent improvement in the textile industry was shown by the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants statistics for last month. Stocks decreased more than 10 per cent, while unfilled orders gained about 23 per cent.

Credit conditions showed little change. Call money still held at 2 per cent, but was available in the outside market at 1½, or less.

Irving Trust Sells Neve Drug Stores

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The Irving Trust Company as receiver for the Neve Drug Stores, has arranged for the sale of 45 of the 58 stores which came under its control when it was appointed receiver. Negotiations are under way for the sale of additional stores.

Missouri Pacific Handles Less Cars

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 11.—Missouri Pacific Railroad in the week ended November 8 handled 31,899 revenue cars, against 34,656 in the previous week, and 36,886 in the 1929 week.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

American Writing Paper Company in October earned net income of $19,234 after all charges and federal taxes. This was after a write-down of $19,498 on pulp and other raw materials, bringing all inventories to cost or market, whichever is lowest.

Weston Electrical Instrument Corporation reports for nine months ended September 30, net profit of $569,037 after charges and Federal taxes, against $684,487 in the like 1929 period. September quarter profit was $120,153, against $222,565 in the third quarter, 1929.

Mexican Seaboard Oil Company net income for quarter ended September 30 was $113,863 after interest, depreciation, depletion, drilling expenses and other charges. In the quarter ended September 30, 1929, the company reported net profit of $141,291. For nine months ended September 30, last, net income was $679,529 after interest, depreciation, drilling expenses and other charges.

September quarter net profit is equal to 9 cents a share on 1,244,383 shares, against 11 cents a share on 1,234,843 shares in the third quarter of 1929. Nine months' profit was equal to 54 cents a share on 1,244,383 shares.

Copper shares lately have been showing a strong disposition to ignore fresh displays of weakness in other parts of the list. That is the copper shares appear to be favored by considerable formidable buying on the slightest dips, while seemingly suffering less from pressure of fresh liquidation. No doubt the red metal group had been quite thoroughly liquidated, at least more so than a majority of other groups. But some are inclined to ascribe relative strength in the group now to expectations that an agreement for curtailment of combined production in South America, Africa, Canada and the United States will be reached shortly. It is expected steps will be taken to cut production 12 to 15 per cent based on the current rate of monthly output. Further conferences are to be held this week, it is understood, at which the present tentative agreement will be definitely adopted.

Perhaps no other stock has been so closely watched during the last week or 10 days as Standard Oil of New Jersey. That issue, representing the premier company of the petroleum industry, had during the period been gradually but persistently drawing down close to the 50 level. And many recalled that John D. Rockefeller, Sr., broke a silence of long duration on business matters about this time a year ago to state that buying 1,000,000 shares of the stock would be placed at that point. The stock subsequently had rebounded to a high of 84⅞ this year, and only recently had again approached that interesting market point. Yesterday, however, after hovering just above 50 throughout the first three hours, the stock finally dropped through, a total of 3,300 shares changing hands at 50, with a drop of a full point immediately thereafter to 49.

Because of the sharp deflation that has taken place in the bulk of securities, the belief is growing in some financial quarters that stocks rapidly are approaching levels at which greater resistance to selling pressure will be exhibited. The action of the market itself, of course, will indicate clearly when those levels have been reached. A demonstration by leading stocks of ability to absorb liquidation and hold firm would be construed as a most encouraging development.

Decision to public quarterly reports of Montgomery Ward's operations, will tend to forestall most of the guesses as to what the company is doing which formerly made the rounds from one end of the year to the other. With the nine-month results now a matter of public knowledge, the figures for the full year will not have the upsetting effect on sentiment which they might otherwise have had. Because of the seasonal nature of Ward's business the initiation of quarterly reports may at first cause some confusion as to the true trend of profits, which could however be obviated by the provision of quarterly figures for a number of prior years at the time such reports are released.

Each decline in standard stocks brings an increase in odd-lot investment buying. Transfer books of some of the larger companies have been showing a steady increase in the number of small holders who have taken the shares out of the Street. Naturally, during periods when necessitous liquidation apparently has been coming into the market, that demand has not had any great influence. In the absence of bull sponsorship, the buying has been confined to the investment demand and to short covering. Eventually, the accumulation of stocks for the accounts of the smaller investors must have a beneficial influence on the market structure.

Steel's unfilled tonnage statement proved about in line with what had been expected in speculative market circles. The report showed an increase of 57,425 tons in the backlog of business on hand as of the end of October, marking the first upturn in unfilled orders reported since the end of July when a gain of 53,991 tons was shown. It was generally assumed, however, that the increase recorded last month was the result largely of the fact that mill output had slowed down a trifle faster than the race of incoming new business. That the market was not ready to accept it as presaging a definite turn, particularly in view of recent comment, of officials in the industry, was evident from the action of Steel common which sold off sharply to new low levels early yesterday afternoon.

Gasoline Demand Ahead for Year

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Demand for gasoline during the period from October 1, 1930, to April 1, 1931, is estimated by the special committee on economic conditions of the American Petroleum Institute at 208,000,000 barrels, or 1.2 per cent more than actual demand during the like period a year ago.

BANKS RECOVER IN STOCK CRASH

HARRISBURG, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania banks and trust companies under the jurisdiction of the State Banking Department were shown to be within a stone's throw of full recovery from the stock market crash of 1929.

The quarterly statement of Peter G. Cameron, secretary of banking, representing a recapitulation of the reports of 948 banking institutions as to their condition on September 24, revealed an increase in deposits of $14,000,000, and more than $2,000,000 in total resources during the three months since the last report on June 30. The deposits and resources of the banks on that date came within $1,500,000 each of the peak of October 4, 1929, the date of the last statement prior to the market slump.

BUILDING ON UP TREND

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—America has spent approximately $4,415,000,000 in new construction during the first 10 months of 1930, according to a nation-wide survey completed by the Indiana Limestone Company.

"Some encouragement is derived from renewed building activity in recent weeks," President A. E. Dickinson said. "In many quarters it is felt that the construction industry will soon provide a real stimulus for general business."

Nine Months' Shoe Production Down

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—September production of leather boots and shoes amounted to 28,918,926 pairs as compared with 28,642,243 pairs in August, the Commerce Department reports. September, 1929, production of boots and shoes totaled 34,830,741 pairs.

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs and chest colds, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics, are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Heap Big Chief!

"But it cannot be true, Uncle Bob!" Gloria Darnton said as she stared out at the mesa west of the ranch.

Gloria had arrived in the dark the night before with Millicent Branby. It was her first time west of Ohio, and most of her life had been spent at her Long Island home, or traveling between the Branby summer place in the Canadian woods and the Granby home on the Florida east coast.

"So that flame-topped hill is a mesa, is it? No, Uncle Bob, I meant that the colors didn't seem possible. Look at the pink and salmon shades!"

"Early morning sun," her uncle explained.

"And the soft green of the ranchlands and those blues and purples on the mountains with their rose-tinted peaks!"

"When the sun gets higher the mountains will be darker and the rose tips will turn white—that's snow."

Gloria's uncle hadn't seen her since she was a little girl. He owned and managed Mesa Ranch, a place where so-called "Eastern dudes" got a taste of ranch life—paying heavily for the same.

For some years Gloria had been the paid companion of Millicent Granby. Millicent was 18 and inclined to be heedless, frivolous and thoughtless. Gloria, 24, had given up teaching French for the better salary of going about with Millicent and keeping her brushed up in her French.

Ordered West

Millicent had been ordered to go West, out of society, and exercise mildly in the open, away from synthetic gin, synthetic jazz and synthetic emotions. Gloria did not, of course, go about in society with the wealthy Millicent, but at other times she was pretty much with her. Gloria told about her uncle and his ranch. Mr. Granby investigated and decided to send Millicent out there. It was a splendid opportunity for Gloria.

"You won't need any of the boys to guide you," Gloria's uncle assured her, after he had personally made sure that the girls could ride well. "You won't get lost. Just remember the ranch is directly east of that mesa and you'll have a landmark."

"How romantic—Indians!" she cried.

Millicent turned to ride over to these Indians.

"Let me do the talking," Millicent said. "I know how to get along with Indians."

She turned to one of the squaws.

The squaw stared at Millicent with her beady, black eyes half squinted.

Snaps Picture

One tawny, well-built Indian was examining a large matrix, partly opened, revealing the blue. Millicent went up to him.

"Heap big chief, eh? Get plenty rich—marry lot squaws—what makes the turquois so blue? Injun have reason for everything—tell paleface squaw Injun's reason for rock of the blue color?"

"Sorry, miss, but I am not the chief—he is the chief." The Indian gravely indicated a younger man, whose black hair was considerably shorter.

"So you are the big chief, is that it?" she asked.

"Um—um," he replied, tapping his dark and somewhat hairy chest, "me chief—me heap big chief—me marry plenty squaw. You like be 'nother one my squaw?"

"Oh—Oh, you positively darling savage," Millicent squealed, "I want to take your picture. I've had scores of proposals but never before from an Indian chief!"

Millicent snapped the picture, took a $5 bill from her purse and tossed it at the chief's feet. She and Gloria left them, went back to their horses and rode down over the knoll. Millicent was still laughing when her mount stumbled. Millicent, not watching, was thrown. She lay there, groaning. Gloria dismounted and ran to her.

To her amazement Chief Walk-in-the-Rain was sitting on the ground, roaring with laughter. He didn't see her.

He caught sight of Gloria, staring in amazement as she approached. He hopped up instantly and came to her.

"Something wrong?" he asked, pleasantly enough. He had noted the worry in her expression.

Gloria told him, adding, "Good heavens, what do you think of us?"

"You'll forgive me, miss, but it was too good a chance to talk the way that the snooty girl—hope she's not a relative of yours—the way the snooty girl expected me to talk."

He hurryied back, slit open her riding boot, and examined Millicent's ankle, shaking his head.

"It's a green-stick fracture of the leg, not the ankle, miss. I'll fix it up temporarily. You are from the dude ranch?

"Yes—and get busy. I thought you could only talk Injun talk—thought you were funny—"

Not An Indian

Millicent scowled and groaned.

The young man cut away the remainder of the riding boot with a keen knife while Gloria held Millicent's leg as directed. He had Gloria cut away her stocking and then deftly cut a small wooden box into splints and bound them in place with the thongs from his high laced boots.

After that he put Millicent in the saddle, brought his own horse out, mounted and led Millicent's horse while Gloria rode beside her to call out if she fainted.

Millicent made the return trip without much trouble and was rather gritty over the pain. Gloria's uncle telephoned for a doctor and introduced Gloria to Chief Walk-in-the-Rain as "Mr. Dennison."

After Dennison had gone, Gloria told her uncle all about it. He had almost as much of a laughing spell as Dennison had enjoyed.

"This man Dennison is an authority on mining and geology," he explained to Gloria. "He's no more Injun than you. Those others were a bunch of Carlisle boys who work for him in the summer."

That evening Mr. Howard Dennison came over to Mesa Ranch. He sent word that Chief Walk-in-the-Rain would like to see Miss Gloria.

When they met him they sat outside in the moonlight for a long while. Mr. Dennison admitted frankly his visit was not to see how the Granby girl was getting on, but solely to see her. It was quite a romantic courtship.

When Millicent was able to walk comfortably her father came out to get her. He had a sort of idea that Gloria hadn't watched over her well enough. When he met Dennison he was much surprised and informed Millicent that this man Dennison was a very noted and wealthy man of a very noted family.

"I'm going to marry Walk-in-the Rain, heap big chief," she said, "otherwise known as Mr. Howard Dennison."

"Ugh!" Millicent said.

By Tuthill

CORDIAL GREETING INTENDED FOR MONTGOMERY EL DORADO PERMITTED JOSEPHINE BUNGLE TO BE THE FIRST MEMBER OF THE FAMILY TO KNOW THAT HARTFORD OAKDALE, WHO SO OFTEN IS AN USHER FOR EXCITEMENT, HAS RETURNED TO TOWN.
WHY MOTHER, THE WAY YOU SLAMMED THAT DOOR! YOU LOOK SO EXCITED. WHAT—?
OH PEGGY, I HAVE GOOD REASON TO BE ALL WORKED-UP. DO YOU KNOW WHO I SAW JUST NOW STRUTTING ALONG THE STREET? WELL, IT WAS HARTFORD OAKDALE, HIMSELF.
HARTFORD! WELL WHAT—?
I THOUGHT AT FIRST GLANCE THAT HE WAS MONTGOMERY AND YOU SHOULD HAVE SEEN THE TERRIBLE LOOK HE HAD THE NERVE TO GIVE ME WHEN I CALLED HIM EL DORADO. AS THOUGH HE WAS INSULTED. IMAGINE! HIM!
THE LAST TIME WE HEARD FROM HARTFORD HE WAS IN PERU AND—
WHEN I FIRST SAW HIM I SMILED AND WAVED TO HIM. IMMEDIATELY HE RUSHED THROUGH THE CROWD AND GRABBED MY HAND. WELL—WHEN I REALIZED WHAT A HORRIBLE MISTAKE I'D MADE I JUST WENT LIMP.

France, in Way of World Peace, Is Provoking War

Europe presents a melancholy spectacle as the nations that fought and won the great war 12 years ago commemorate this anniversary of the armistice.

Instead of a new era of that righteousness which alone "exalteth a nation" Europe seems still to be held from another war only by an armed truce.

At Geneva where the preparatory commission for disarmament of the League of Nations after six wasted years is holding its seventh annual session you see Germany working with the United States to try to bring that conference to some beneficial action. You see that England is also reasonably in line with this program. You see Italy and France still disputing in terms of competitive armaments. And you see France and France's dependencies—the Little Entente—standing up for France's great military and naval program.

If the course of France brings down upon her an increasing amount of criticism from the peoples of those countries that fought with France the common cause and helped to save France, the French people have only the militarism of their government to blame.

For while her fellow members in the family of free nations that fought on the side of France, and even Germany, the enemy nation that they defeated, are striving to stabilize and reinforce peace among themselves and with the world, France opposes their efforts.

The United States and England and Germany are striving for further reduction and limitations of armaments as an auxiliary to world peace.

But France is holding out for stronger military alliances and for a great military and naval program as a condition precedent to any real co-operation with the great nations of the world to prevent war and promote peace by establishing justice as the foundation for international relations.

And by standing in the way of world peace, France, in effect, is provoking another world war.

That is the truth about the European situation today, and it is melancholy enough to depress the whole world.

He Did the "Impossible"

Arthur W. Thompson Achieved Success by Doing Things People Said Could Not Be Done

How did Arthur W. Thompson, whose funeral today is being attended by mighty figures in finance and industry, come to be a mighty figure himself at so youthful an age?

Certainly it was by his own unaided efforts. He started at the bottom as a rodman.

Examination of the story of his life suggests that his success was due to his willingness to tackle the "impossible."

Problems arose, on the railroads and public utilities with which he was connected, that presented grave difficulties. Some people would call them impossible of solution. But Mr. Thompson had a certain genius, or daring, or patience—or a combination of all these qualities—that enabled him to overcome the difficulties.

It was exemplified again and again.

A Good Airport Plan

Armstrong's Proposal That the County Do the Work to Provide Jobs for the Unemployed Is Commendable

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong has offered a praiseworthy plan for completion of the new county airport in his proposal that the county itself do the job instead of giving it to a contractor. The idea is for the county to exercise control over the employment of the laborers who will do the work.

Since it is mostly pick and shovel work that remains to be done, in the building of roads, runways and a drainage system, there is believed to be no question of the county's being able to do it in a satisfactory way.

There is a question, of course, if the county can do it as cheaply as a private contractor. The taxpayers, however, are not likely to object to a little additional expense, provided the plan gives jobs, as intended, to unemployed citizens of the county who otherwise might continue unemployed.

Wastefulness is to be avoided, but if it should cost a few dollars more to hire pick and shovel men instead of using a steam shovel, there is not likely to be a protest.

The Inconsistency of It

Repeal of the Blue Law Is the Only Sensible Way Out of a Farcical Situation

Football games were played without police interference and in the presence of large crowds in many parts of Allegheny County on Sunday.

A game played in Pittsburgh was raided, and two of the players arrested. Magistrate Thomas Jones fined them in Morals Court yesterday and told them hereafter to play Sunday games outside the city limits.

In Philadelphia a football game was played on federal government property Sunday with the express permission of the War Department, which also authorized the taking of a collection among the spectators. The War Department authorized the game after the Sabbath Association had appealed to it to help enforce the Blue Law.

The Blue Law applies to all Pennsylvania. The inconsistencies in its enforcement or lack of enforcement, have produced a farcical situation and placed the Commonwealth in a position that is far from dignified.

2,330 Hours in a Tree

Smithton Youth's Feat Was Not a Bad Preliminary to the Study of Forestry

Over at Smithton, in Westmoreland County, a young man came down a few days ago from a tree in which he had been sitting continuously for 2,330 hours.

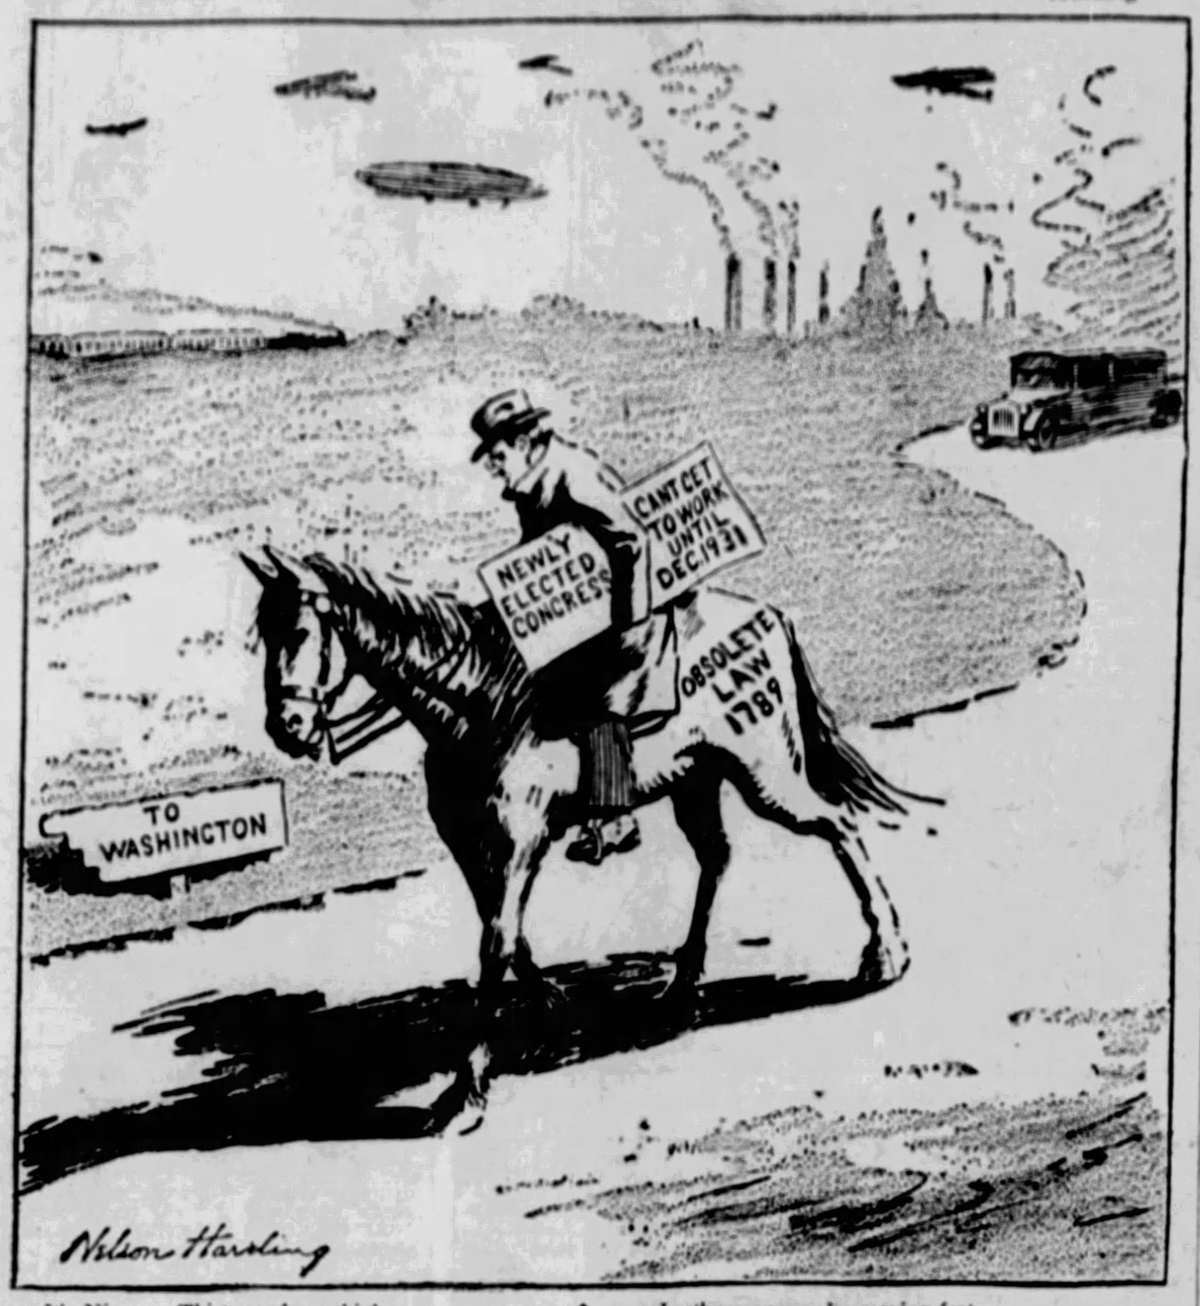
He had hoped, through his feat, to earn enough money to go to college for a course in forestry; but his reward has been disappointingly small.

If he was observant the months spent in the tree were not a bad preliminary to the study of forestry.

If Dr. Joseph S. Illick, state forester of Pennsylvania, had been living in a tree, day and night, summer and autumn, for as long as the Smithton youth, he undoubtedly would have learned something new and important about trees, and gathered enough material for another of his entertaining and authoritative books about trees.

It's An Old Foolish Custom

By Nelson Harding



It's Nineteen Thirty, and we think
We live in a progressive age,
But in the method pictured here
We're only in the horseback stage.

In other ways we're moving fast,
Yet in this matter we are slow,
The Congress we elect today
Won't meet until a year or so.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Rah! Rah! Rah!

What's become of the old college student who tried to make the varsity eleven?

He's satisfied now to make the scrub huddle and lean on 10 other congested athletes.

Then you start a broken-field run with 21 fraternal fanatics slugging you from right to left, hitch-hiking on your shoulder blades and giving you the good old right foot of fellowship. After a horrible hegira of contusions, abrasions and a fierce carven of bruises and abuse, you fall unconscious across the goal line, gasping like a goldfish on the appraiser's scales. It is then that all your opponents jump on your prostrate silhouette and try to stamp you into the ground like a tent peg. Journeys end in lovers' greetings.

A football player who has been thoroughly stamped into the turf serves two purposes. He wins the game for good old Grudge University. And next spring the baseball team can use him for a home plate.

We think it was Emerson who said something about sending your boy to college and having the other boys educate him.

Which may be all right, but they kick your boy so hard that the dean must hand him his diploma in mid-air. And if he does any thinking, he does it while he's bouncing.

We concede that football is a beautiful spectacle. We like to watch two indignant universities vent their education on each other.

But if we ever become the proud father of a 200-pound fullback, we are going to send him to night school so that he can sneak up on the other football eleven in the dark.

The game is too rough. You can even lose a scrimmage in the grandstand. We were defeated last Saturday by an old grudguate who had organized a searching party to explore his raccoon coat and discover the lurking place of a silver flask.

We asked him why he didn't sew his hip pocket on the outside of his raccoon kimona. And the fight was on. He won. He was fighting for good old Harvard, while all we could fight for was the exist.

(Copyright, 1930.)

Isn't It So?

Skirts are to be longer, but they'll take their time about it.

Loyalty has transformed a mediocre life to a thing of beauty.

To win, the baseball nine and the football eleven often have to play like sixty.

EROS

By Archibald Henderson

A certain little planetoid, named Eros on its discovery, was first observed in 1898. Since that time it has been a subject for special study. This at first sight appears singular, since perhaps 2,000 of these planetoids have been found in the heavens. There was a special reason, however, why interest should concentrate upon Eros. Its exceedingly thin orbit, of an elliptical shape, brings it nearer to the earth than any other planetary body. It furnished an opportunity to make accurate determinations, or rather close estimates, of solar-system distances.

Just as everyone knows that Columbus discovered America in 1492 and that George Washington could not tell a lie, so everyone knows that the distance from the earth to the sun is 93,000,000 miles. But is it? The actual distance from the center of the sun, as a matter of fact, is not a fixed quantity, always the same. It varies with each sector of the elliptical orbit, being greatest at aphelion (summer solstice) and least at the opposite end of the orbital diameter. Of course, the distances at the periods of the equinoxes fall between the maximum and minimum values.

When we speak of the distance from the earth to the sun, we mean the average distance. This is actually the radius of a circle, assuming that the earth moved in a circular orbit about the sun. Such a distance has been generally accepted by astronomers as the yardstick of the solar system.

Inter-stellar distances are so great that extreme mathematical accuracy is not possible. This is obviously the case since all determinations are necessarily indirect. Various ways, perhaps as many as a dozen, have been devised by ingenious astronomers for determining this earth-sun yardstick. But even now, no exact determination of this mean distance has ever been found. But the determinations made are accurate enough for all practical purposes.

It has long been known that a fairly close value for the earth-sun yardstick is 92,870,000 miles. The measurement is off, not millions, but only thousands of miles. Would Eros afford a method for determining a closer approximation?

Many photographs of Eros were made, the entire series being placed in the hands of A. R. Hinks, of the Cambridge Observatory. The displacement of the image on one of these star plates is approximately one-twentieth of an inch. So it may be seen that the work was one of great delicacy; and the resulting calculations required much time and labor. Hinks finally reached the conclusion that "the angle subtended at the sun by the earth's radius is 8.807 seconds of arc." This is a quantity known to astronomers as the solar parallax. It represents the angle between the lines from the sun's center to the ends of the earth's radius.

The length of the earth's radius is known, to a high degree of accuracy. From the triangle of which this is the third side, it is not difficult to compute, given the correct value of the solar parallax, the length of the sun-earth unit of solar system measurement. It was found, in round numbers, to be 92,900,000. This is greater by 30,000 miles, than the value agreed upon at the Paris Conference of 1911.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

It's one thing to cure a man of being a leper—

But quite another to cure him of wanting to be one.

Even leprosy has its points, as the United State Public Health Service is discovering. Down in Carville, La., they have a leper colony. Leper colonies, thank God, are not the tragic places they once were. Lepers can be cured.

They cure them in Carville. But the leper doesn't always consider it a favor! One discharged patient has paid his way back twice in the hope of being readmitted, although he is no longer sick. For one gets free board and a lot of attention in a leper colony. And a perfect alibi for any cussedness. But out in the work-a-day world, well men have to hustle and consume their own smoke. So back come the lepers to Carville!

Queer? Not so queer as one might think. We're all like that. Few of us are lepers, but we all have some sort of plaster on our necks. Plasters of ignorance. Plasters of fear. Plasters of grief. Plasters of hate. And the mix-ups that come from those conditions. Domestic jams.

Business snarls, Unpopularity, Unemployment, Loneliness, bitterness, weariness of soul. All of us have plasters that shut us out as surely from the free and full life as the leper's diseased flesh shuts him.

And to hear us talk, a free and full life is the best thing we want. If only we could have Our Chance! If only we had a little more education so we could get a better job . . . if only we could make our relatives treat us decently . . . If we were rid of our fear and loneliness, our sensitiveness and bad temper . . . then we'd show 'em!

And, of course, all these things are possible. Others have freed themselves from handicaps — so can we. But do we really want to be free?

Think of the work it would mean to get that education, for instance. Think of the fun we'd have to give up—Digging in on some old correspondence course instead of going over to Bill's for a little poker, or listening to the radio.

Think of the self-control it would take to get the family into line. Easy enough to talk about putting your feet down, but when it comes to putting it . . . that's different!

And suppose we did get all fixed up. And were perfectly free and independent, who could we blame for our mistakes?

Lepers can always blame their shortcomings on their leprosy. That's why some of them want to go back and be lepers, even after they're cured. And we can always hang ours on our families, or the boss or our lack of equipment. But suppose those handicaps were removed: what would happen to our alibis?

We could no longer say we inherited our bad temper from grampa . . . or blame our unpopularity on Aunt Min . . . or talk about the record we'd have made if Dad had let us finish Hi—No, we'd have to take the blame ourselves, straight on the old jaw—horrid thought! And we'd have to show results . . . much bigger results than the fellows who are still carrying plasters. For, being free, we'd have no excuse for failure—

Freedom—the more we think about it, the more expensive it seems. And so, though we still clamor loudly for Liberty, just try and jar us loose from our plasters! We know when we're well off!

Think It Over

Drawn by Hal Coffman.

THE OPTIMIST.

Pictured here is a well-known moron. You recognize him at once. He is the man who ponders the racing charts, looking for new ways in which to lose his money, and FINDING them.

He is a first cousin to the stock market gambler, and a life member of the ancient and honorable fraternity of suckers.

"Once a sucker always a sucker," is an old and tested proverb—but of none is it truer than of the man who follows the ponies.

The race track habitue knows that the only honest thing in horse racing is the horse, and that the horse doesn't count. But hope springs eternal in the human breast. You might as well try to break a dope fiend of the drug habit as to convince this poor dreamer that HE CAN'T WIN.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The Casino restaurant in Central Park opened with a gusto, floundered awhile, suffered a raid and emerged one of the five culinary high spots of the metropolis. The other four, to my notion, are the Ritz, St. Regis grill, Pierre's and the Colony.

Its popularity was enhanced considerably by the patronage of Mayor Walker. It gained much publicity as a haven to which His Honor fled to escape the rigors of City Hall. The Casino's ex-officio social arbiter is A. Drexel Biddle, Jr., of the Philadelphia Biddles.

Officially chairman of the Board of Governors, he sponsors such gala nights as the "Wall Street Evening" which swamped diners with eruptions of ticker tape. At the tables were many high in the goings on in Broad and Wall. Dorothy Parker often lunches there too, dear me!

The Casino, aside from such bon vivants as Mayor Walker and M. Biddle, naturally attracts social trailers with a consuming ache to be "among those present" in the society columns. Also a sprinkling of stage stars who never overlook a chance for the spotlight.

The management hoisted its menu tariff to an almost prohibitive notch and thus brought big spenders on the run. Give a New York cafe a few Social Register names to juggle plus a reputation for being unusually expensive and it is set for a limited run at least.

The Casino is on a graceful rise surrounded by several python limbed oaks, its glass enclosed verandas often filigreed with moonlight. In the offing is that most entrancing of all vistas—the jagged skyline about the Plaza fountain.

In other days young buckaroos of the town used to race up 5th avenue in snow cutters for the yearly prize of a magnum of champagne, offered by the Casino and McGowan's Pass Tavern, for the first to reach them when a snow fell. The Casino is in Urban decor and drops luxury.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Fog

About our world that shrinks each moment more;
The door-yard trees grow spectral now and win
A ghostly beauty never theirs before.
Fog creeps and clings about the vines, the hedge
Is dim and gray that was so fresh and green;
A wisp of fog twines up the window ledge

As though the fog its barriers interposed
To work in all familiar things some change;
As though dear doors were locked, old ways were closed.
Gray veil on veil, the fog is closing in

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Are you measuring up to your former ideals?

Or have you fallen from the standards you once established.

And why have you had a change of heart?

Certain things beckoned and you thought the future would be time enough to carry with a set platform.

You wanted to "have your fling" and thought you would settle down after that and travel the route mapped out to attain the goal you set.

You never thought that self control came in for consideration because you thought you could stop anytime and start by the original plan.

But have you ever tried to do so?

You might be greatly surprised by the fight you would have to put up with yourself if you actually turned in another direction.

It would be much easier to extend the boundaries beyond which you should not go.

If you haven't put yourself to the test of abandoning some habit or line of effort which is not beneficial to you, just try it out and see how hard it is to break up habit of even short standing.

You may be greatly shocked by what such an effort will present.
